

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

I. The results of source investigations have but rarely met with an acquiescence at all commensurate with the labor, the acumen, and the learning so often expended upon them. This is due to several causes. In the first place, the entire or partial loss of the original or earlier authorities naturally gives a more or less wide latitude to the constructive imagination, and, in consequence, different conclusions are often drawn from the same concrete material. In the second place, any one who has even superficially examined the contributions in the field of source research must needs have observed that scholars have, with few laudable exceptions, failed to ascertain at the very outset, as far as this is still possible, what authorities were accessible to the later writer, as well as the extent to which he would be likely to have utilized all the available material — a problem which can only be solved, if soluble at all, by a thorough examination of the working method, as it is revealed in the writings of the particular author under investigation. But even where these conditions have been complied with, a practice has been all but universally followed which in my judgment must be held primarily responsible for the many failures met with in this field of philological study. I refer to the constant practice of at once assuming direct indebtedness on the score of more or less striking coincidences, whether in form or substance or both, the very probable contingency being too often lost sight of that such parallelisms may have been unavoidable, the similarity of the subject-matter naturally leading to similarity in its stylistic presentation, or that they had passed more or less intact through intermediary channels, or, finally, that two writers were independently indebted to a third source common to both. Unfortunately we are rarely in a position to determine with anything like satisfactory accuracy the real condition of affairs, but there is, at least, one criterion which almost invariably enables us to state dogmatically, if not what actually did happen, at all events what did not. It is a principle which, so far as my observation goes, has hitherto been ignored in source investigations. I have elsewhere had occasion to dwell upon this,<sup>2</sup> but its prime importance for the present study may justify my formulating it again :

Mere coincidence or similitude of statement with some earlier author, be it never so striking when taken by itself, not only affords no reliable clue to direct indebtedness, but actually renders such an assumption frequently impossible, in case there be found to exist side by side equally noteworthy divergences or contradictions.

It will thus be apparent that the only method that can yield acceptable results will consist in a process of elimination, i.e. we must endeavor to determine what predecessors, from ~~one~~ the list possibly accessible, an author could not, for one reason or another, have consulted. It will then be, in many cases, comparatively easy to decide to what extent he probably utilized the authorities still remaining, provided, of course, that their character, purpose, and scope are satisfactorily ascertainable.

II. If we apply these general methodological principles to an investigation into the Sources of Plutarch's Life of Cicero, our first task would naturally be to acquire an adequate conception of his biographical method<sup>1</sup> in regard to the faithfulness or freedom with which he followed still extant authorities<sup>2</sup> and to his habits of citing or suppressing his sources of information. Finally, as we are here dealing with the biography of a Roman, the question also arises whether Plutarch was sufficiently conversant with Latin to enable him to make an intelligent use of the Latin works, so indispensable to a satisfactory treatment of the career of the great orator. That the answer can only be a strong affirmative has been shown elsewhere.<sup>3</sup> As regards the other problems a careful and unbiased examination yields the following conclusions :

The extent of Plutarch's indebtedness to his Roman predecessors is largely conditioned by their number, their character, their exhaustiveness, and their accessibility. It must,

<sup>3</sup> Cp. Transact. p. 140 ff. and the useful but far from exhaustive discussion of Sickinger, De linguae Latinae apud Plutarchum reliquiis et vestigiis, Freiburg Diss. 1883. W. Vornefeld, De scriptorum Latinorum locis a Plutarcho citatis, Münster Diss. 1901, is superficial and worthless. The famous statement in Plut. Dem. c. 3 (see Appendix III) merely signifies that he did not feel competent to institute a comparison between Demosthenes and Cicero as orators. Cp. Klapp I.c. p. 3 and Peter, Die Quellen etc. p. 61.

4 SOURCES OF PLUTARCH'S LIFE OF CICERO

therefore, be determined for each biography independently. On the other hand, Plutarch, following the all but universal practice of ancient historians, did not feel called upon to ransack the primary and often widely scattered sources, in case this laborious task had already been satisfactorily performed by others.<sup>4</sup> That this had been done for the life and career of Cicero before Plutarch became his biographer can admit of no doubt. He was, therefore, relieved of the necessity of consulting a great variety of authors who wrote in what was to him after all a foreign, albeit not an unfamiliar language. But quite apart from this consideration, an extensive Latin library was certainly not accessible to him in his small native town which, as he tells us with touching local pride, he did not care to desert, lest it grow less by even one inhabitant. This assumption is, indeed, confirmed by his own words in Dem. 2,<sup>5</sup> which must have been written with special reference to the biography of Cicero, for the following reasons: In the first place, this complaint would have been unjustified, if he had taken advantage of his residence in Rome to acquaint himself fully with the extensive literature on Cicero at his disposal or had taken pains to collect such traditions concerning him as still survived in the imperial city. In the second place, in composing the life of Demosthenes he was not in the predicament of which he speaks, for all the sources were written in Greek, and the orations, in particular, must have long been familiar to him. The proximity of Athens, moreover, rendered these sources easy of access, and his opportunities for acquiring hearsay information were, to judge from his associations, unquestionably abundant.<sup>6</sup>

Again, Plutarch conforms to the usage of ancient historiography in habitually suppressing the authorities whom he most extensively followed.<sup>7</sup> Where he does cite them, it is generally with reference to minor details, or because of discrepancies in the traditional records which he did not care or was unable to reconcile. In such cases, he often quotes the account of some noted author which differed from the one accepted by him, and allows the reader to make his own inferences as to their respective validity. The paucity of sources, finally, which we must postulate at all events for Plutarch's Roman Lives, involves the necessary corollary that he did not constantly pass from one to the other, but that he would follow one guide for continuous stretches at a time, digressions or ἐμβλήματα being usually labeled as such by a λέγεται or some similar phrase.

III. Now of the writings which dealt, directly or indirectly, incidentally or exclusively, with the career of Cicero and which were still extant in the days of Plutarch, the following list will probably be found to be fairly exhaustive; for it is unlikely that important sources of information existed of which no trace has survived.*

<sup>7</sup> The virulent speech against Cicero put into the mouth of Fufius Calenus by Dio Cass. XLVI. 1–28 may give us an idea of their character. When the conditions which gave rise to these publications had passed away, they were naturally allowed to perish, and probably but few survived until Plutarch's time. Cp. also Ascon. It is irrelevant to my present purpose to enumerate even the most important Roman authors referred to directly in Plutarch's voluminous writings,<sup>11</sup> we being here more immediately concerned with his allusions to such as are given in the above list, although the explicit quotation of authorities by no means, as we shall have frequent occasion to see, involves direct knowledge of them — no more, in fact, than the failure to cite them necessarily implies Plutarch's ignorance of their existence.

Plutarch quotes Cicero's ὑπόμνημα τῆς ὑπαρείας and ἀνέκδοτα (Crass. 13), his Laudatio Catonis (Cic. c. 39), and the philosophical works in a vague and general way (c. 24. 40; Comp. Dem. et Cic. 2). Out of a total of about a dozen references to the Letters and some twenty to the Speeches, four<sup>12</sup> of the conspiracy of Catiline. Cp. Cic. ad Att. II. 20, 4, Bibulus hominum admiratione et benevolentia in caelo est. Edita eius et contiones describunt et legunt. They seem to have been directed against Caesar.

<sup>10</sup> Cited by Sen. Suas. VI. 18 ff., together with Livy and Pollio, as historians who gave an account of Cicero's assassination.

<sup>11</sup> This is done, with the indication of the passages, if still extant, in Transact. p. 124 f. note 4.

<sup>12</sup> It is perhaps not accidental that three of them were written in Greek. Besides these we have allusions to letters of Trebatius (c. 37) and Brutus (Comp. Dem. et Cic. 4) to Cicero and one written by Brutus to Atticus (c. 45). A number of items, found in the extant Correspondence, are given without any hint as to their ultimate source, e.g. c. 36, 6, Cicero's answer to a request of Caelius (= ad fam. II. 11); some again are introduced by a vague γράφει έν έπιστολαῖς (c. 37) or credited to him by a phrase like τὰ μὲν οὖν έν ταῖς έπιστολαῖς γεγραμένα τοιαῦτά ἔστιν. That they were all taken at second or third hand will be shown below.

8 SOURCES OF PLUTARCH'S LIFE OF CICERO

former and fifteen<sup>18</sup> of the latter occur in the biography of Cicero. Nepos, though not the vita Ciceronis, is cited five times<sup>14</sup>; Sallust, but not the Catilina, three times<sup>15</sup>; Asinius Pollio<sup>16</sup> and Tiro's<sup>17</sup> exhaustive<sup>18</sup> biography twice each. Livy's<sup>19</sup> name occurs a dozen times in Plutarch, but nowhere in his Cicero. The latest literary allusion is the incidental reference to the Memoirs of Augustus.<sup>20</sup>

To these must be added the far more numerous references to earlier authorities, indicated by vague and general phrases. They often introduce a digression, or incidental observations; nor must the plural number be taken as a proof of a plurality of sources, as it often merely corresponds to an 'on dit,' or was, in some instances, perhaps occasioned by the citation of several authorities in the source directly consulted:

IV. This preliminary discussion will, I hope, have paved the way for a detailed examination into the sources of the information contained in Plutarch's Life of Cicero, but, before I proceed to this analysis, I deem it expedient to survey, as briefly as possible, the results at which previous investigators have arrived, particularly as my own conclusions will be found to differ so materially from those which have hitherto been more or less generally accepted.

While opinions have naturally varied as to the precise extent of Plutarch's indebtedness to the several authorities who, in the conviction of scholars, had been consulted by the biographer, substantial unanimity seems to exist as regards the following points: Plutarch, we are assured, unquestionably read and utilized Cicero's ὑπόμνημα τῆς ὑπατείας, the Letters and Speeches (of the latter particularly the Catinilian, the Philippics, and the pro Plancio), and the autobiographical chapters of the Brutus.

10 SOURCES OF PLUTARCH'S LIFE OF CICERO

Finally, it is generally held that he was under deep obligations to Sallust's Catiline and to Tiro's de vita Ciceronis and de iocis Ciceronis.

These confident allegations, however, rest upon no foundation. Plutarch, as I hope to demonstrate in the following pages, did not consult for the purpose of this biography a single work of Cicero's nor Sallust's monograph nor Tiro nor Livy. While this part of my analysis is strictly negative in character, I shall also show that Plutarch's biography contains a very considerable amount of information of post-Livian or post-Augustan origin and that one of the principal sources for these portions was none other than Suetonius's Life of Cicero.

V<sup>a</sup>. To begin with the works expressly cited by Plutarch, for these quotations must naturally create the impression of having been secured at first hand,<sup>1</sup> we may first take up the Letters of Cicero. Now the mere presumption that Plutarch had been acquainted with this unique and inexhaustible thesaurus of historical and autobiographical information at once puts us on the horns of a dilemma : if he was, he must either have read the entire correspondence (which, as may be observed in passing, was probably double the size of our extant collection<sup>2</sup>) and then have culled from it, like a modern Drumann, what appeared relevant to his purpose, or else he did not consult any part of it at first hand.

That the latter is the only acceptable alternative can be easily shown. In the first place, Plutarch on his own statement had not the leisure, and, as I have also pointed out above, he could not have had the disposition, to ransack so vast a storehouse for his materials, not to mention that the ancients, with the possible exception of Suetonius,<sup>3</sup> utterly failed to realize

<sup>3</sup> The extensive use which he makes of these Letters is all the more noteworthy, because the subjects of his extant writings would not naturally nor the incomparable value of these contemporary documents.<sup>4</sup> Finally, even if we were to grant, on the strength of the direct and indirect allusions to these Letters, that Plutarch perused only a part of them, the capriciousness of the selection no less than the comparatively trivial information which such reading yielded would still remain quite inexplicable. But if these general considerations should not prove convincing, positive evidence that the biographer never read the Correspondence of Cicero will be furnished by c. 37. We are there told that Trebatius wrote to the orator that Caesar would be pleased with the support of Cicero, but if his advanced age should forbid an active participation, he might at least retire to Greece, remaining neutral throughout the impending struggle. Cicero, however, vexed that Caesar did not write to him a personal letter, replied in anger,<sup>5</sup> saying that he would do nothing unworthy of his past career. Plutarch concludes with the clause τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐν ταῖς ἐπιστολαῖς γεγραμμένα τοιαῦτά ἔστι. Now we still possess a letter of Cicero which seems to refer to this very incident; but unless we gratuitously assume that the allusion is based upon some letter now lost, it differs, in spite of a general agreement, in a number of details sufficiently significant to preclude Plutarch's perusal of the original.<sup>6</sup> Thus, we find nothing in the Latin about often suggest the expediency of their consultation. We may, therefore, be reasonably certain that he exploited the Correspondence to the fullest extent in his Life of Cicero. Cp. also Macé, Essai sur Suetone pp. 284-298 (Cicéron chez Suetone).

<sup>6</sup> ad. Att. VII. 17, 3 : Trebatius quidem scribit se ab illo . . . rogatum esse ut scribebat ad me ut essem ad urbem, nihil ei me gratius facere posse. Haec verbis plurimis. Intellexi ex dierum ratione, ut primum de discessu nostro Caesar audisset, laborare eum coepisse, ne omnes abessemus. . . Illud admiror non ipsum ad me scripsisse (= θαυμάσας δτι Καῖσαρ αὐτὸς οὐκ ἔγραψεν) . . . rescripsi ad Trebatium — nam ad ipsum Caesarem qui mihi nihil scripsisset nolui (ἀπεκρίνατο πρὸς δργήν!) — quam illud hoc tempore difficile esse . . . sin Caesar's proposal of eventual neutrality, nothing which would justify the assertion that Cicero replied πρὸς ὄργην. Finally, the extant collection contains a number of letters which passed between these parties at this time, and they are all couched in friendly terms.<sup>7</sup> They throw considerable light upon the attitude of the two men toward each other, and yet we are asked to believe that Plutarch overlooked these altogether while he inaccurately reproduced the tenor of another!

V<sup>b</sup>. So much for the Letters.<sup>1</sup> I pass on to the Speeches. In the detailed account of the Catilinian Conspiracy, the famous orations are expressly alluded to in four<sup>2</sup> places, coincidences with Plutarch's narrative are also numerous, and hence scholars have had no hesitation in ascribing a direct knowledge of them to the biographer. But if ever mere coincidences have proved to be worthless as evidence of direct indebtedness, it would be in this case, for the reason that this episode was certainly dealt with at greater or less length in all histories or biographies of Cicero, and hence the salient, well-established facts are related with substantial unanimity in Cicero, Sallust, Appian, Florus, and Dio, to mention only the extant accounts. It is in the arrangement of the subject-matter and in details that divergences are revealed, and they are all incompatible with the assumption that Plutarch had carefully perused the original records. A few particularly significant illustrations will suffice:

In Cic. in Cat. I. 4, 9, we read : reperti sunt duo equites Romani qui . . . me meo in lectulo interfecturos pollicerentur . . . exclusi eos quos Catilina mane ad me salutatum miserat. Here no names are given, but in the pro Sulla 6, 18 one Cornelius is introduced as qui me in sedibus meis in conspectu uxoris meae ac liberorum meorum trucidaret, and bellum geretur, non deero officio nec dignitati meae, pueros ὑπεκθέμενος in Graeciam (ὧς οὐδὲν ἀνάξιον πρᾶξει τῶν πεπολιτευμένων).

he also figures in Sall. Cat. 28, together with L. Vargunteius, a senator, as a would-be assassin of Cicero. Now in Plut. c. 16 two others, Cethagus and one Marcius, are mentioned as those who had been delegated for this murderous task; he also knows the informant who warned Cicero and adds the absurd detail κωλυθέντες εἰσελθεῖν ἡγανάκτουν καὶ κατεβόων ἐπὶ θύραις, ὥστε ὑποπτότεροι γενέσθαι.<sup>8</sup>

Doubtless the names of these men were originally unknown, but subsequently suspicion fastened upon several conspirators, which gave rise to the variants in our extant accounts of the episode. Whether the correct one is found among them is indeterminable and immaterial, but there can be no question that neither the first speech against Catiline nor the pro Sulla could have been Plutarch's source, and, to anticipate the discussion below, Sallust is, at least for this particular item, also excluded.

Again, in Cat. II. 2, 4, Cicero says moleste tuli quod ex urbe parum comitatus exierit. Utinam ille omnes secum copias eduxisset, and this is confirmed by Sall. Cat. 32, cum paucis in Manliana castra prefectus est, whereas Plutarch c. 16 reports μετὰ τριακοσίων ὄπλοφόρων . . . πρὸς τὸν Μάλλιον ἔχώρει.

Cic. in Cat. III. 3, 6, 5, 10 speaks of a large number of daggers and swords having been found in the house of Cethagus, but Plut. c. 18 adds hemp and sulphur and that the weapons were all νεοθήκτους.

According to in Cat. III. 4, 8, urbem ex omnibus partibus quem ad modum descriptum distributumque erat, incendissent. Sallust Cat. 43 and Appian II. 3 mention twelve districts. Plut. c. 18, on the other hand, says 100 men were assigned to as many districts, and adds further details not found elsewhere, but ignores L. Cassius (in Cat. III. 6, 14; IV. 6, 13).

<sup>8</sup> Appian's account (II. 3) is still more circumstantial and in flat contradiction with both Cicero and Plutarch. He says Lentulus and Cethagus intended to entice Cicero into taking an early morning walk and then by engaging him in conversation and thus drawing him away from his people to murder him. Dio Cass. 37, 32 mentions only δύω τινάς.

The story of Cicero's energetic measures to crush the conspiracy in the bud, of his shrewd dealings with the Allobrogians, and of the exposure in the senate, so graphically told in Cat. III. 2, 4 ff., again differs in important details from the narrative in Plut. c. 18. We may conclude with one other example, though the list of discrepancies is by no means exhausted. When Plut. c. 21 says that Cicero after hearing Caesar's plea for clemency immediately ἀναστὰς ἐνεχείρησεν εἰς ἑκάτερον τὰ μὲν τῇ προτέρᾳ, τὰ δὲ τῇ γνώμῃ Καίσαρος συνειπών, οἵ τε φίλοι πάντες οἰόμενοι τῷ Κικέρωνι συμφέρειν τὴν Καίσαρος γνώμην etc., it must be evident that he never read the fourth speech against Catiline.<sup>4</sup>

A similar analysis of Plutarch's statements in c. 12 (de lege agraria), c. 23 (where, e.g., Cato is said to have been the first to hail Cicero as pater patriae, whereas he himself<sup>5</sup> mentions Q. Catulus), his account of the trial of Roscius (c. 3),<sup>6</sup> of Verres (c. 7 f.), of Milo and Murena (c. 35), can leave no doubt in any unprejudiced mind that the biographer had not consulted these speeches. Finally, even the pro Plancio must be eliminated from the list of Plutarch's possible sources, although Cicero is expressly cited as his authority. The juxtaposition and analysis of the two passages will make this clear :

pro Plancio 26, 64 f. : Vere me hercule hoc dicam : Sic tum existimabam, nihil homines aliud Romæ nisi de quaestura mea loqui

<sup>4</sup> This view is also advocated by Sibinga l.c. p. 77, though he regards this oration as non-Ciceronian.

<sup>5</sup> in Pis. 3, 6; pro Sextio 57, 121. Both of these speeches are full of biographical detail which Plutarch would not likely have ignored had he known them. And the same is true of many others in the Ciceronian collection.

Tum quidam quasi qui omnia sciret, "Quid tu nescis," inquit, "hunc quaestorem Syracusis fuisse?" . . . ea res, iudices, haud scio an plus mihi profuerit, quam si mihi tum essent omnes gratulati. That the ultimate source of this exquisite story was the Ciceronian speech is, of course, self-evident, only Plutarch could not possibly have had it before his eyes when he penned this paragraph,<sup>7</sup> so thoroughly spoiled has it been in the retelling. Thus, the best part of the joke turns upon the interlocutor's failure to distinguish Lilybaeum, Cicero's district, from Syracuse, the two together forming the province of Sicily. Plutarch knew nothing of this and calmly speaks of Cicero as quaestor of Sicily. Again, according to the original Cicero made an excursion, in Plutarch he has left his province at the expiration of his term of office. In the Latin an unknown individual puts the annoying question, in the Greek Cicero questions an eminent friend. Cicero is very explicit as to the locality, Plutarch speaks vaguely of Campania. In the Latin, once more, we have the delightful colloquy which culminates in Cicero's complete discomfiture, in the Greek only a simple question is asked. Finally, Cicero's application of the story, and the lesson he drew from the incident, are partly omitted, partly misunderstood, and partly contradicted in the clumsy reproduction. Certainly no Roman biographer or historian, such as Tiro, Nepos, Livy, or Suetonius, could have transmitted this anecdote in the emasculated shape in which we find it in Plutarch. It represents doubtless what in modern parlance would be called a newspaper clipping, a stray item which Plutarch may have come upon in some of the many post-Augustan collectanea of rerum memorabilium and which he had hastily transferred to his Commonplace Book, or else he was here quoting a story he had once heard, but had imperfectly retained in his memory.

A close analysis, then, of Plutarch's references to Cicero's orations, whether direct or indirect, can, I feel convinced, justify but one conclusion: to wit, that, while he may have glanced at some speeches, he did not use them as biographical sources of information.<sup>8</sup>

Vc. That Cicero's Brutus, especially the famous autobiographical chapters at the close, was consulted by Plutarch seems to be universally admitted, this conviction being based upon c. 3 and 4, which are chiefly devoted to the philosophical and rhetorical training of the young Cicero. No doubt the numerous coincidences existing between the two accounts, more particularly the enumeration of the Asianic rhetoricians, might lend color to this supposition, for even Strabo, the only later writer who besides Plutarch speaks of them, cites the Brutus as his authority.<sup>1</sup> And yet Plutarch cannot have read a line of this work, so glaring are the contradictions. In the first place, Plutarch's knowledge of the history of Greek philosophy and rhetoric was unquestionably profound and extensive, and he was not, therefore, called upon to consult a <sup>8</sup> We possess 54 speeches entire, 17 in fragments, and we know the titles, in some cases also the contents, of 30 more. Plutarch, therefore, had he desired to read some of Cicero's speeches, would have been confronted with a collection of over one hundred from which to choose! See Appendix I.

Latin writer for his information on these subjects.<sup>2</sup> But we are happily not compelled to rely upon such considerations. If Plutarch read the Brutus, how was it possible that he should represent Cicero as leaving Rome immediately after the Roscian trial, whereas Cicero says expressly that he remained two years longer actively engaged in forensic occupation until his health gave out, a statement which Plutarch, after asserting that it was put forth as a pretext by the orator to conceal his cowardly departure out of fear of Sulla, confirms in the very next paragraph? Again, Plutarch makes him return on the news of the dictator's death, whereas Cicero did not do so until two years later, when, as he tells us himself, the objects which had caused him to leave Rome had been attained. Finally, in the enumeration of Cicero's teachers Plutarch omits Demetrius the Syrian and Aeschylus the Cnidian, but adds Posidonius and refers to Molo as Apollonius the son of Molo. Posidonius, although his name occurs no fewer than eighteen times in the extant writings of Cicero, is referred to but twice, and that in a parenthetical way, as the orator's teacher; but these passages were certainly unknown to Plutarch, not to mention that neither the time when nor the place where Cicero enjoyed his instruction is there given.<sup>3</sup> The confusion between Apollonius ὁ μαλακός, much the older man, and Molo, Cicero's teacher both in Rome and in Rhodes,<sup>4</sup> furnishes still another proof that Plutarch was not indebted to the Brutus. Their identification, it is true, is extremely common both in Greek and Latin writers after the time of Cicero, Strabo, and Valerius Maximus,<sup>5</sup> the younger rhetorician being referred to often as Apollonius or Apollonius Molo—for Plutarch's Ἀπολλωνίῳ τῷ Μόλωνος<sup>1</sup> is in my judgment due to a misunderstanding of his Latin source, which probably contained the genitive Apollonii Molonis, he being ignorant of the fact that the Latin, unlike the Greek, does not express descent by the genitive case.

<sup>2</sup> If his biographical source had said no more than that Cicero had been a pupil of Rhodian rhetoricians, their names would readily suggest themselves to him. But if he found them already mentioned, there is only one biographer of Cicero known to us who would be likely to have done so, namely Suetonius, the author of the de grammaticis et rhetoribus.

Vd. Of the writings of Cicero still to be discussed there remain only his poems de consulatu and de temporibus suis, the Greek Memoir on his Consulship and the de consiliis suis or ἀνέκδοτα. On general considerations, it is to the highest degree improbable that Plutarch utilized any of the poetic<sup>2</sup> effusions for his narrative, although certain items may be ultimately based upon them, as the following passage in Servius ad Verg. Ecl. VIII. 104 f. seems to show: hoc uxori Ciceronis dicitur contigisse, cum post peractum sacrificium libare vellet, in cinerem ex ipso cinere flamma surrexit quae flamma eodem anno consulem futurum ostendit eius maritum, sicut Cicero in suo testatur poēmātē. This same omen is related by Dio Cass. 37, 35 and with circumstantiality of detail in Plut. Cic. 20, Terentia's characterization being introduced by the words ὡς αὐτὸς φησιν ὁ Κικέρων. What more probable, than that the poem de consulatu is the original source of both Dio and Plutarch! A closer examination, however, reveals considerable objections to this assumption. In the first place, Servius, who, as the dicitur perhaps indicates, cites only at second hand, places the incident at an earlier time, when Cicero was again a private citizen, whereas Plutarch expressly informs us that the annual festival of the Bona Dea always took place in the house of the consul,<sup>3</sup> and that Cicero accordingly went to the residence of a neighbor, there to deliberate upon the best mode of dealing with the conspirators. In the second place, the interpretation of the omen, as well as the time of its occurrence, exhibits noteworthy divergences. If we are to believe Servius, Cicero himself spoke of it as having happened before he was elected; according to Plutarch and Dio (who, however, makes no mention of the Bona Dea or of Terentia) the miracle occurred shortly before the famous debate in the senate and was interpreted as justifying Cicero in insisting on the death penalty.<sup>4</sup> Again, the deliberations of the consul in Plutarch follow the arrest of the conspirators, whereas in Sallust c. 46 they are made to precede the sensational exposure, and there is no allusion to the prodigy.

<sup>1</sup> So again in Plut. Caes. 3, but not elsewhere. It is, however, significant to note in this connection that Suet. Caes. 4 also speaks of Apollonius Molo where Molo was meant.

<sup>2</sup> The one solitary allusion to a Latin poet, throughout all the voluminous writings of Plutarch, is found in Lucull. 39, where the reference to Horace (viz. Epist. I. 6, 40 ff.), if not an actual interpolation, as I still believe it to be, is in any case taken at second or third hand. Cp. Transact. p. 149 note 16.

The narrative in Plutarch is homogeneous throughout and not marred by any irrelevant additions. Now, unless we gratuitously maintain that the authority of Cicero is specially invoked for the sole purpose of substantiating the parenthetical remark concerning Terentia, while the truth of the curious story immediately preceding was allowed to stand on its own merits, we must conclude that the entire passage was culled from one and the same source. But if so, this authority cannot have been the Ciceronian poem, even if we lay no stress upon the chronological difficulty in Servius for the reasons given above. The Greek Memoir, on the other hand, is no less out of the question, and that chiefly for two reasons : In the first place, Cicero's own reflections<sup>5</sup> could not have assumed the condemnatory form which Plutarch has given to them (αὐτὸς τε δόξειν ἀνανδρος καὶ μαλακός etc.) ; in the second place, the disparaging remarks concerning his wife could not well have been made at a time when their estrangement had not yet taken place, the ὑπόμνημα having been written in 60 B.C. In the ἀνέκδοτα published after the divorce they might, of course, have occurred, but then there is no evidence that this work rehearsed the story of the conspiracy from the beginning, nor are we justified in ascribing to Plutarch any first-hand acquaintance with the ἀνέκδοτα on the strength of so vague a reference as the ἐν τινι λόγῳ etc. in his Life of Crassus.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Dio Cass. I.c. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ, but in c. 45 he speaks of these ceremonies as taking place παρά τε τοῖς ὑπάρχοις καὶ παρὰ τοῖς στρατηγοῖς. May not this statement be ultimately due to some scholar, like Fenestella, who wished to reconcile the conflicting chronology in the traditional accounts of this incident?

<sup>4</sup> Dio, however, places the incident early in the morning, Plutarch in the evening. In the former again τὸ πῦρ ἐπὶ μακρότατον παρὰ τὸ εἰκὸς ἥρθη, in the latter ἐκ τῆς τέφρας καὶ τῶν κεκαυμένων φλοιῶν φλέγα πολλὴν ἀνήκε καὶ λαμπράν. Plutarch and Dio, therefore, unquestionably followed different authorities.

That the ὑπόμνημα τῆς ὑπατεῖας, on the other hand, cited in the same passage, had been read by Plutarch, it were no less rash to conclude from this solitary and incidental allusion ; and yet, since the time of Heeren, scholars have with ever-increasing confidence maintained that we must indeed recognize in this Greek Memoir the principal, if not actually the only, source of Plutarch's information on this subject.<sup>7</sup> We shall see subsequently that there is no satisfactory evidence for this assumption.

VI. Turning to a consideration of Sallust's De coniuratione Catilinae, it might be supposed that a comparison between the extant monograph and the account in Plutarch would definitely settle any question as to the indebtedness of the one to the other ; and, as a matter of fact, the great majority of scholars are convinced that Plutarch did make a more or less extensive use of the Sallustian narrative, a conclusion which rests solely on the unquestionably numerous coincidences between them. But the equally numerous divergences in matters of detail, certain chronological discrepancies, the different attitude of Sallust and Plutarch toward the principal actors in the drama, the noteworthy circumstance, finally, that they have not a single item of information in common which is either omitted or contradicted in all other extant sources, these are facts which certainly far outweigh in significance and argumentative validity the existing parallelisms, the more so as the latter reveal no peculiarities in style or substance which might seem incompatible with a non-Sallustian origin. Many of these dissimilarities have, of course, been noticed ; but so far from their leading to the only inference which is psychologically reasonable, namely that Plutarch could never have consulted Sallust, we are seriously asked to believe that Plutarch, while industriously appropriating Sallust's material, had from some unaccountable, capricious fancy repeatedly and suddenly abandoned his guide, in order to incorporate from other sources numerous items which partly contradict or modify or expand his previous basic narrative. That such a patchwork method, even if it were justly attributable to Plutarch, must have resulted in producing an incoherent mosaic instead of an admittedly consistent and homogeneous narrative, goes without saying ; and yet it is precisely some such conception which underlies many of the source analyses to which Plutarch's Lives have been subjected.

<sup>5</sup> These deliberations seem to be ultimately based upon a suisoria, possibly suggested by Sallust l.c., and entitled : Deliberat Cicero an coniuratores interficiat. See also p. 6<sup>8</sup>. If so, a post-Augustan origin for this chapter, probable on independent grounds, would be revealed.

<sup>7</sup> So e.g. Weizsäcker, Schmidt in special treatises, Buresch, Willrich, and, preceding them all, Sibinga, whose discussion is, however, strangely ignored by the German advocates of the hypothesis. Heeren, as usual, merely postulates it as a fact. Peter, Die Quellen etc. p. 129 f., seems to be the only critic who denies Plutarch's indebtedness to the ὑπόμνημα, though he does so on insufficient grounds.

In order to establish the falsity of the current belief, it will only be necessary to enumerate some of the more flagrant contradictions between the two authors.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For others see Schmidt, Lübeck Progr. I. c. pp. 2-7, who, wholly intent upon proving Plutarch's extensive indebtedness to Cicero's περὶ μνημονίας, is of course compelled to eliminate Sallust as far as possible as one of his sources. See also notes in Appendix I.

In Sallust c. 23, 25, 28, we read how Q. Curius and Fulvia came to reveal to Cicero the secrets of the conspirators. In Plutarch, on the other hand, the name of Curius is conspicuous by its absence, and Fulvia's information is confined to the contemplated assassination of the consul at the hands of Marcus and Cethegus, for whom Sallust substitutes C. Cornelius and L. Vargunteius.

In Sallust c. 30, L. Saenius, a senator, announces the suspicious movements of Manlius in Etruria, a few days after the famous decree videant consules etc. had been passed; in Plutarch c. 15 this information is given by Q. Arrius and it is immediately followed by the same decree.

In Sallust c. 30, Q. Metellus Creticus and Q. Metellus Celer are mentioned among a number of other generals as having been dispatched by a decree of the senate to prevent or quell any uprisings in other cities; in Plutarch c. 16 Q. Metellus, without the distinguishing cognomen, is appointed by Cicero himself as commander-in-chief (τὰ μὲν ἔξω πράγματα Κ. Μ. διεπίστευσε).

In Sallust c. 32, Catiline cum paucis in Manliana castra profectus est; in Plutarch c. 16 μετὰ τριακοσίων ὀπλοφόρων . . . πρὸς τὸν Μάλλιον ἔχωρει. Neither can this passage nor Sall. c. 43, Statilius et Gabinius uti cum magna manu duodecim simul opportuna loca urbis incenderent etc., have been the source of Plut. c. 18, as already pointed out above (p. 13). We may add that the Greek author says that μία τῶν Κρονιάδων was selected for the deed, whereas no date at all is given in the Latin.

The story of the arrest of the conspirators (Sall. c. 47 and Plut. c. 19) also exhibits noteworthy discrepancies. Thus the latter says that they were handed over to the praetors, but Sallust gives the names of all the custodians, and there is not a praetor among them; nor does he add the picturesque, albeit absurd, touch, that Lentulus on abdicating immediately exchanged his senatorial toga for a garb of mourning, ἐν τῇ βουλὴ καταθέμενος, he having probably brought it with him for just such a contingency! Stress has been laid upon the phrases abdicato magistratu and in liberis custodiis habeantur as closely corresponding to ἀπωμόσατο τὴν ἀρχήν and παρεδόθησαν εἰς ἀδεσμον φυλακήν; but, even if the parallelisms were more exact than they are, how, we ask, could a verbal resemblance<sup>2</sup> in statements of this kind be avoided? The same holds true of other verbal similarities.

Plutarch c. 10, after attributing to Catiline two atrocious crimes which are not mentioned in Sallust, says ἄλλας τε πίστεις ἀλλήλοις ἔδοσαν καὶ καταθύσαντες ἄνθρωπον ἐγεύσαντο τῶν σαρκῶν. Sall. c. 22 also refers to these pledges, but speaks only of the drinking of a mixture of human blood and wine and then adds the significant remark: nonnulli ficta et haec et multa praeterea existimabant ab eis qui Ciceronis invidiam quae postea orta est leniri credebant atrocitate sceleris eorum qui poenas dederunt. Nobis ea res pro magnitudine parum comperta est.

In the account of the memorable debate in the senate, Sallust c. 50 f. mentions Tiberius Nero<sup>3</sup> as the one who first proposed the milder sentence and says nothing of the opposition of Lutatius Catulus; Plutarch on the other hand (c. 20) omits the name of Nero and maintains that all followed the first speaker Silanus in recommending the death penalty, until it came to Caesar.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> So Dio XXXVII. 34 says of Lentulus: ἀπειπεῖν τὴν στρατηγίαν, Appian II. 5 ή βουλὴ Δέντλον παρέλυσε τῆς ἀρχῆς and Cic. in Cat. III. 6, 15, magistratu se abdicavit.

<sup>3</sup> So also Appian II. 5, whose narrative is otherwise independent of Sallust and in closer agreement with Plutarch.

<sup>4</sup> προσειθέντο τούτῳ πάντες ἐφεξῆς μέχρι Γατού Kalaspos and Cat. Min. 22 οἱ δὲ μετ' αὐτὸν ἐφεξῆς ἡκολούθησαν διχρι Kalaspos Dio Cass. XXXVII. 36, δικαῖος, πάτων πρὸ αὐτοῦ ψηφισμένων ἀποθανεῖν σφᾶς, γνώμην ἔδωκε etc. So also Cic. Cat. IV. 4, 7, duae dictae sunt sententiae: una D. Silani . . . altera C. Caesaris; ad Att. XII. 21, 1, illud turpiter ignorat (sc. Brutus): Catonem primum putat de animadversione dixisse, quam omnes ante dixerant praeter Caesarem; et cum ipsius Caesaris tam severa fuerit, qui tum praetorio loco

It is needless to multiply illustrations. These discrepancies, when added to the well-known facts that Plutarch and Sallust do not agree in their chronology, that the Greek account is written from a decidedly Ciceronian standpoint with only an occasional unfriendly note, and, finally, that the whole creates the impression of being a consistent narrative and not a piece of patchwork made up of ill-assorted stones taken from numerous quarries,<sup>5</sup> make it clear that Sallust cannot under any circumstances be regarded as a direct source of Plutarch's information regarding the conspiracy.

VII. The question as to Plutarch's possible indebtedness to Livy, though this is improbable for the reason given above (p. 8<sup>19</sup>), is intimately associated with the determination of the sources of Dio Cassius, whose acquaintance with the libri ab urbe condita, whether in the original or in the Epitome, is reasonably certain.<sup>1</sup> But the extent to which he consulted this authority must ever remain problematical, in view of the fact that Dio's first-hand knowledge of contemporary historical sources covering the period of Cicero's career (for it is with this that we are here alone concerned) is equally well established,<sup>2</sup> although we are not justified in crediting him dixerit, consularium putat leniores fuisse Catuli, Servilii, Lucullorum, Curionis, Torquati, Lepidi, Gellii, Volcatii, Figuli, Cottae, L. Caesaris, C. Pisonis, etiam M<sup>r</sup>. Glabronis, Silani, Murenae, designatorum consulum, and Suet. Caes. 14, senatu universo . . . ultimam statuente poenam, solutus . . . censuit.

<sup>1</sup> The technical difficulty involved in such a process for an ancient investigator has been well pointed out by Nissen, Ueber die Quellen der 4. u. 5. Dekade des Livius, 1865, p. 78, although the famous One Source Theory which he deduces from it cannot be accepted without very considerable modifications and restrictions.

<sup>2</sup> E.g., the long speech put into the mouth of Cicero (Dio XLV. 18-45) exhibits a first-hand acquaintance especially with the second Philippic oration. Cp. I. G. Fischer, de fontibus et auctoritate Cassii Dionis in enarrandis a Cicerone post Caesaris mortem . . . habitis orationibus, Leipzig 1870. And the reply of Calenus (XLVI, 1-28) is probably very extensively indebted to Antonius's speech (Sept. 19, 43) and the pamphlet literature of the day.

with the extensive reading of the works of Cicero, Sallust, and others, attributed to him by many scholars.<sup>3</sup> Under these circumstances it is impossible to say with any degree of confidence to what extent Dio was directly indebted to Livy for those events in which Cicero was a conspicuous participant. If Dio's strange hostility toward the man was in any way conditioned by the character of his sources, then Livy's alleged influence must be confined within still narrower limits, for his attitude toward Cicero was demonstrably favorable, though his admiration for the orator need not have blinded him to the defects of the statesman. But, be this as it may, if Livy must needs be regarded as a fons primarius of Dio, then Plutarch's Cicero could not also have been under obligations to him,<sup>4</sup> the chiefly unavoidable coincidences with Dio here too not counterbalancing the significant divergences in matters of detail and in the general historical setting, so to speak, which an unprejudiced comparison brings to light.

VIII. Appian, especially in his account of the Conspiracy, contains some remarkable parallelisms<sup>1</sup> with Plutarch. Some scholars have accordingly maintained that the historian directly consulted the biographer, while others contend that they were both indebted to a common third source, such as Cicero's ὑπόμνημα, Sallust, Livy, or Asinius Pollio.<sup>2</sup> Appian's

<sup>4</sup> This is certainly true of the narrative of Cicero's death, as may be seen from Livy's account, preserved by Seneca Rhetor, Suas. VI. If what Val. Max. IX. 12, 7 says of Licinius Macer is based, like so much of his material, upon Livy, then Plut. c. 9, who deals with the same incident, is also quite independent of the historian.

<sup>2</sup> Cp. Willrich l.c. pp. 38–42, with the literature there cited, to which may be added C. Peter, *Zur Kritik der Quellen der älteren röm. According to Soltau, he made an extensive use of Asinius Pollio through the medium of Strabo, Nicolaus, and Socrates Rhodius, the same material being also transmitted to Plutarch by several Greek 'go-betweens.'

partiality for Augustus and his equally marked unfriendliness toward Cicero, combined with many palpable errors which Plutarch does not share with him, are sufficient to disprove the above hypotheses. Everything, on the contrary, goes to show that Appian's narrative is to a large extent a hasty and slipshod compilation, based upon sources which I do not venture to name, but which, unless all signs fail, betray a post-Augustan origin.

IX<sup>a</sup>. Tiro's biography of his patron was unquestionably as exhaustive as it was authoritative, for it was based upon a most intimate knowledge of the orator's works and a deep familiarity with his character and conduct, acquired through life-long association in the capacity of literary executor, amanuensis, and friend. Nor can there be any doubt that considerable information came to him from the living lips of Cicero himself. That it long remained the standard authority on the subject may perhaps be inferred from the fact that a century later Tacitus cites Tiro for the date of Cicero's death.<sup>1</sup> Its eulogistic and apologetic character would certainly have attracted rather than repelled a man like Plutarch ; and, as we find that Tiro is actually cited twice, the conclusion that he had been consulted directly may seem irresistible. Hence we are not surprised to find that scholars are well-nigh unanimous in regarding Tiro's vita Ciceronis as one of the chief sources of Plutarch.<sup>2</sup> And yet, an unprejudiced examination of the allusions in question is quite fatal to such an inference. In the first instance (c. 41), Tiro is cited in a merely parenthetical sort of way in defense of Cicero's conduct and the motives which led to the divorce from Terentia and to his subsequent marriage with his wealthy young ward. The account, which takes up an entire page, is distinctly unfavorable to Cicero, his own reasons being regarded as at best plausible pretexts which his subsequent conduct stamped as such. The severe criticism of Antony, moreover, ἐν ταῖς πρὸς τοὺς Φιλιππικοὺς ἀναγραφαῖς, as well as similar references in later writers,<sup>8</sup> show that we are here face to face with a chapter taken from the contemporary chronique scandaleuse, which some author, fond of gossip and conversant with the criticisms and explanations put forth on both sides, impartially welded together. That this was not done by Plutarch will not be seriously denied, nor can any contemporary biographer, such as Tiro, be responsible for so objective a résumé. The whole passage, in fact, not only has a suspicious post-Augustan look, but is quite in the manner of Suetonius.

The pathetic story of Cicero's proscription and assassination, told at length and in a most graphic manner in c. 46–49, contains, at its close, the other allusion to Tiro's biography. After relating the inhuman treatment of Cicero's body at the hands of Pomponia, and how she compelled Philologus, his alleged betrayer (c. 48), to eat of his flesh, Plutarch, habitually unable to reject a story, however incredible, so long as it points a suitable moral, tells us (as if to relieve his conscience for having accepted what ἔνιοι τῶν συγγραφέων ἴστορήκασιν) that Tiro nowhere even so much as mentions this Philologus whose treacherous conduct forms an integral part of the preceding narrative. But if so, then Tiro cannot have been Plutarch's source for the closing period of Cicero's life. The grawsome character of the tale itself, the moral which it is made to point, and the very reference to ἔνιοι συγγραφεῖς, would alone show that contemporary authorities are out of question; for such apocryphal anecdotes could not arise until the real facts concerning Cicero had become obscured by time and thus brought within the pale of the idealizing imagination, until a kind of legendary halo had formed about the historical individual. And, as a matter of fact, we know that the death of the great orator appealed powerfully to the sympathetic fancy of subsequent generations. But if the post-Augustan origin of the chapters under notice is thus established on general grounds, the correctness of this view may be concretely demonstrated by the following observation. In one of the Controversiae of Seneca, the title of which is given in full above (p. 6<sup>8</sup>), no fewer than sixteen rhetoricians are introduced who, each in his own way, discuss the ingratitude of one Popillius who, though acquitted of the charge of parricide through the efforts of Cicero, thereafter became the murderer of his benefactor. In the midst of this recital, Seneca inserts the following significant statement : Popillum pauci ex historicis tradiderunt interfectorem Ciceronis et hi quoque non parricidii reum a Cicerone defensum sed in privato iudicio :<sup>4</sup> declamatoribus placuit parricidii reum fuisse. This passage, of course, admits of but one interpretation, to wit, that the connection of Popillius with the death of Cicero is unhistorical, being an invention of rhetoricians which was subsequently improved upon for epideictic purposes by making the alleged assassin a former client of Cicero in a murder trial, this circumstance naturally enhancing the pathetic features of his base ingratitude. Now when we read in Plut. Cic. c. 48, that among the assassins of Cicero there was one Popillus φ πατροκτονίας ποτὲ δίκην φεύγοντι συνεῖπεν ο Κικέρων, it will be at once manifest that the authority here followed had already abandoned the sober, unembellished facts of history in favor of the presumably more popular fiction of later declamatores, and Plutarch is so completely under its spell that he did not, as in the case of the Philologus incident, virtually stamp the story as apocryphal by the half-frank, half-naïve avowal that earlier, contemporary writers, such as

Tiro, had failed to record it. And yet the apparently insignificant circumstance that in this very narrative it is not Popillius, as we should expect, but Herennius who after pursuing and overtaking Cicero deals the fatal blow, has still preserved an unmistakable trace of the genuine account in which Popillius either played only a subordinate rôle or, what is more likely, did not figure at all.<sup>5</sup>

Finally, we cannot but recognize the handiwork of these same rhetoricians in the suicidal deliberations<sup>6</sup> which Cicero is alleged to have indulged in on reaching Astyra in his flight. Κἀκεῖ διενυκτέρευσεν ἐπὶ δεινῶν καὶ ἀπόρων λογισμῶν, ὥστε καὶ παρελθὲν εἰς τὴν Καίσαρος οἰκίαν διενοήθη κρύφα καὶ σφάξας ἑαυτὸν ἐπὶ τῆς ἔστιας ἀλάστορα προσβαλεῖν, a passage which bears a most suspicious family likeness to the suasoriae of the Deliberat Cicero type.<sup>7</sup>

IX<sup>b</sup>. But if Plutarch was independent of Tiro in the very chapters in which the latter is expressly quoted, any one of <sup>5</sup> It is also worthy of notice that neither the historians quoted by Sen. Suas. VI (and both Livy and Asinius are among them), nor the sources of Appian and Dio Cassius, seem to be acquainted with the parricide version. Cp. Appian B. C. IV. 20, ὁ δὲ Λαῖνος (so always in his account) καὶ δικῆν τινὰ διὰ τοῦ Κικέρωνος ποτε κατωθώκως etc., and Dio XLVII. 11, οἱ Αρετῆς μὲν δὴ καὶ εὐσεβεῖς τοσαῦτα τότε ἐπιφανῆ ἔργα ἐγένετο. Ποπίλος δὲ δὴ Λαῖνος τὸν Κικέρωνα τὸν Μάρκον ἀπέκτειν καίπερ εὐεργέτην αὐτοῦ ἐκ συνηγορήματος δυτα. The opening sentence, the quite gratuitous addition of τὸν Μάρκον, as well as the illustrations which follow, clearly point to a collection à la Valerius Maximus as the ultimate source of Dio. The narrative in Val. Max. V. 3, 4, however, appears to be based upon Livy, for just as Livy ap. Sen. l.c. declared, in cuius (sc. Ciceronis) laudes persequendas Cicerone laudatore opus fuerit, so Valerius maintains that only another Cicero could adequately deplore the sad end of the orator; but he too seems as yet ignorant of the later story, unless the words, C. Popillium Laenatem defendit, eumque salvum ad penates suos remisit, and the frigid antithesis, se caput ferre quod pro capite eius quondam peroraverat, must needs be interpreted as covert allusions to a murder trial. It must, as is obvious.

the following criteria will justify us in still further eliminating his vita Ciceronis in numerous other passages of the Greek biography, where scholars have nevertheless on general principles, it would seem, postulated an extensive indebtedness to it.

Tiro, we contend, must be rejected as a direct source of Plutarch: (1) Wherever recorded items of information are distinctly unfavorable to Cicero; and, if such occur within an otherwise homogeneous narrative, it will follow as a necessary corollary that the entire chapter is equally non-Tironian. (2) All paragraphs of importance which clearly contradict, or are inconsistent with, the extant utterances of Cicero cannot possibly have emanated from the editor of his correspondence and speeches. (3) All details which manifestly betray, for one reason or another, a non-contemporary or post-Augustan origin, must naturally have been wanting in Tiro's vita Ciceronis.

Now in applying these principles to the work under investigation I must again emphasize the necessity of keeping steadfastly in mind that Plutarch cannot, on psychological grounds alone, have accumulated his biographical information by consulting one particular authority, only to abandon it at the next moment, then reverting to it in the succeeding paragraph, and so on with kaleidoscopic variation.<sup>1</sup>

The very first chapter furnishes a number of variants concerning Cicero's father (οὐδὲν ἦν πυθέσθαι μέτριον — οἱ μὲν — οἱ δὲ) which are mutually exclusive, one being unquestionably slanderous. Again, the reason given for the retention of the cognomen on the part of the first Cicero, and the refusal of his famous descendant to discard it in spite of the solicitation of his friends, absurdly imply that the Romans habitually regarded this appellative in the light of an opprobrious nickname. Plutarch's explanation must, therefore, have originated at a later time, when these cognomina had attracted the attention of philologists,<sup>2</sup> particularly as the alleged connotation of the term is due to a false etymology.<sup>3</sup>

Chapter 2. The prediction of Cicero's future greatness, though clearly a vaticinium ex eventu, may have been recorded by Tiro as well as the detailed account of his career at school. The statement, however, that he was taken μέσον αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τιμῆς casts some doubts upon this assumption, for a similar story is told by Nepos of Atticus, Cicero's fellow pupil.<sup>4</sup> In any case, Tiro cannot have been Plutarch's authority for the ἐρρύη πως προθυμότερον ἐπὶ ποιητικήν and for the estimate of Cicero's poetic productions. This paragraph, as well as the passage in c. 40, τῇ δὲ πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν εὐκολίᾳ παῖςων ἔχρητο. Λέγεται γὰρ, ὅπηνίκα ρνείη πρὸς τὸ τοιοῦτον, τῆς νυκτὸς ἐπη ποιεῖν πεντακόσια, is unquestionably post-Augustan,<sup>5</sup> and in all probability the entire narrative was taken directly from Suetonius's vita Ciceronis.

Chapters 3–5, which are closely connected, deal with the life of the young Cicero up to the time of his quaestorship. They contain the following indisputable evidence of non-Tironian origin, although they are habitually attributed to this source. Not to lay stress upon the fact that Plutarch does not seem to have known that Cicero associated himself with both Mucii, the augur and the pontifex, the statement that he subsequently served under Sulla in the Marsian War is notoriously false, for according to Cicero himself<sup>6</sup> he served under the consul Pompeius Strabo.<sup>7</sup> Again, we learn that immediately on leaving school Cicero Φίλωνος ἤκουσε, whereas his first teacher was Phaedrus,<sup>8</sup> Philo not reaching Rome till after the death of Mucius, if the augur be meant. The account of the Roscian trial, to which we shall have occasion to refer again, is also full of errors which Tiro could not have committed.

<sup>7</sup> Perhaps we may recognize in this error a deliberate attempt to bring the two great men into synchronistic association, Pompeius Strabo being too obscure and unimportant a figure. To cite only Roman analogies, cp. the

Chapter 4, on the philosophical and rhetorical studies of Cicero, has been analyzed above (p. 17); and the same considerations which proved Plutarch not to have been indebted to the Brutus apply with equal force to Tiro's biography.

Chapter 5 is no less replete with errors and contradictions. That Tiro was well acquainted with the de divinatione, which contains a violent attack upon the Delphic oracle,<sup>9</sup> goes without saying; but if so, it is difficult to understand how he could have spoken of Cicero's visit to the shrine and of the answer of the priestess recorded by Plutarch. Following the advice of Apollo to keep aloof from politics, Cicero, we are told, lived in retirement for a while, his scholarly seclusion earning for him the nicknames of Greekling and pedant. This is also demonstrably erroneous, as Cicero immediately on his return from Asia (77 B.C.) applied himself assiduously to forensic pleading,<sup>10</sup> being elected unanimously to the quaestorship the year following. Surely an invention so palpably apocryphal — the chronological contradictions may well be attributed to Plutarch's notorious negligence in such matters — cannot have emanated from so trustworthy a source as Tiro.

The anecdote of the impassioned acting of Aesopus, the alleged teacher of Cicero, is an irrelevant addition, its story of Sulla and the young Caesar (Suet. Caes. 1), of Accius and Pacuvius, Caecilius and Terence. If so, all early contemporaneous authorities would here be excluded as possible sources for Plutarch's statement.

digressional character being plainly indicated by ιστοροῦσιν. That the story was still unknown to Cicero may be shown by a passage in the Tuscul. Disput.<sup>11</sup>

Finally, the remark at the end of the chapter, that Cicero by his excessive use of raillery and repartee πολλοὺς ἐλύπει καὶ κακοηθείας ἐλάμβανε δόξαν, will certainly not be attributed to the author who carefully collected the dicta Ciceronis.<sup>12</sup>

Chapters 6–9, which bring the narrative down to the consulship of Cicero, are perhaps the most incoherent in the entire biography, being made up of anecdotes, witticisms, personal characteristics, and historical items, some of which are open to serious objections. In at least two instances a post-Augustan origin must be assumed, and in another we unexpectedly come upon a statement highly derogatory to the orator, although these chapters are otherwise extremely eulogistic.

After relating the story of Cicero's quaestorship, which culminates in the anecdote discussed above, Plutarch speaks of his hero's efforts to win popularity and then suddenly tells us of his moderate means, adding that people marveled at his not accepting legal fees. Now the lex Cincia de donis et muniberibus, which forbade this, had, indeed, become virtually a dead letter even in Cicero's time ;<sup>13</sup> but it does not seem likely that any contemporary writers would have expressed their astonishment that the orator had failed to violate an existing statute. This was, however, entirely natural after the time of Claudius, who repealed the old law and substituted definite fees, the maximum being fixed at 10,000 sesterces.<sup>14</sup> The remark of Plutarch, as may be observed in passing, also proves that he did not consult the speeches against Verres, a fact confirmed by the conflicting statements regarding the 'litis aestimatio,'<sup>15</sup> the extremely low figure (750,000 sesterces) given by Plutarch being taken from some writer unfriendly to Cicero, as shown by the words which follow: διαβολὴν ἔσχεν, ως ἐπ' ἀργυρίῳ τὸ τίμημα καθυφειμένος, an accusation all the more remarkable as he repeatedly emphasizes the scrupulous honesty of Cicero in these very paragraphs and elsewhere, e.g. c. 36, Comp. Dem. et Cic. 3. The statement concerning the orator's precarious health is contradicted by Plutarch himself (c. 4) and by Asinius Pollio.<sup>16</sup> Again, the purchase of three villas and a house on the Palatine cannot, of course, be reconciled with the remark touching his modest means above referred to, but seems in some way directly associated with the bribery charge immediately preceding. The confusion and misrepresentation here pointed out would be unaccountable had Plutarch in these chapters been following Tiro or any other contemporary biographer. This inference is still further confirmed by the observation that Cicero did not buy the house on the Palatine until after his consulship,<sup>17</sup> and above all by the use of ἐν Ἀρπτοῖς, for which we should certainly expect ἐν Ἀρπίνοις, as Arpi is a town of Apulia, where Cicero possessed no estate. All editors, from Xylander to Graux, accordingly agree that Plutarch here blundered. They strangely, however, overlooked the following passage in Martial, IV. 55, 3,

Luci, gloria temporum tuorum
Qui Gaium veterem Tagumque nostrum
Arpis cedere non sinis disertis,

an unmistakable allusion to Cicero. That the poet here committed the very same error,<sup>18</sup> is quite incredible. The only plausible explanation of this coincidence is to assume that Arpi was an abbreviated form of Arpinum in use in Domitian's time or possibly earlier, but it is quite unlikely that Plutarch found it in any Augustan or pre-Augustan author.

The ninth chapter exemplifies by means of three illustrations the rigid integrity of Cicero as praetor. That these were not taken from a continuous narrative, such as Tiro's, but rather represent "clippings," is indicated by the introductory λέγεται, and by the virtually identical phrases at the beginning and the end of the Licinius anecdote,<sup>19</sup> which have all the appearance of labels for collectanea or chapter headings in a commonplace book. This origin seems further strengthened by the observation that the description of Οὐατίνιος as χοιράδων δὲ τὸν τράχηλον περιπλέως again occurs in c. 26: Βατίνιον ἔχοντα χοιράδας ἐν τῷ τραχήλῳ, as if he had been here mentioned for the first time. That the two anecdotes in this chapter, the nineteen examples of wit and repartee which take up c. 25 and 26, and the batch of satirical sayings collected in c. 38 ultimately go back to one and the same source,<sup>20</sup> such as the collections of Tiro or Trebonius, is generally believed; but that Plutarch had himself consulted these is highly improbable,<sup>21</sup> as he might have taken them

Cicero's conduct in the Manilian affair,<sup>23</sup> with which the chapter closes, is related only in Plutarch and Dio (XXXVI. 44). According to Plutarch, Manilius was accused, in the praetorship of Cicero, περὶ κλοπῆς.<sup>24</sup> If this corresponds to furtum or peculatus, the case would not have come under Cicero's jurisdiction at all, but under that of his colleague, C. Orchivius, Cicero having charge of matters de pecuniis repetundis.<sup>25</sup> But even if the Greek could mean the latter, the difficulty would still not be removed, for Manilius had not at that time been the governor of a province. Again, when Plutarch says that in this alleged trial, περὶ κλοπῆς, there was considerable opposition to Manilius on the part of the nobility, we have an evident confusion with the lex Maniliana, so well known to us through Cicero's extant speech pro imperio Cn. Pompei. This preceded the defense of Manilius, here spoken of, which was not undertaken until after his term of office had expired. It is impossible, therefore, that Plutarch was indebted for this paragraph to an early and trustworthy authority.

The narrative of the Catilinian Conspiracy (c. 10–23) has, owing to the numerous extant accounts of this same episode, engaged the special attention of scholars who, though differing in details, have yet come to the unanimous conclusion that Plutarch here, if anywhere, drank deeply of the original fountains, making extensive use of Sallust and of Cicero's orations, his Greek Memoir, and the de consiliis suis. We have shown

<sup>24</sup> Dio l.c. does not state the nature of the charge (δικης τέ τινος) and places it after the praetorship, Cicero Cornel. fragm. 1 agrees as to the date with Plutarch, while Ascon. Ped. pro Corn. p. 59, in a mutilated passage, says the charge was de vi.

that these assumptions are erroneous and that the entire story is not a mere mosaic of isolated facts pieced together capriciously from many sources, but is a consistent and coherent narrative, in spite of some unimportant chronological divergences, such as the enumeration of the Ciceronian speeches preceding the Catilinian,<sup>26</sup> and one undoubted ἔμβλημα which gives a fanciful explanation of Sura, the cognomen of Lentulus (c. 17).

But if so, the question at once arises, whether Tiro may not have been Plutarch's fons primarius, at least for this strictly historical portion.

That his narrative was based upon a Latin authority may perhaps be inferred from the occurrence of an evident Latinism in c. 14 which seems to have escaped observation. It is the phrase τοὺς πραγμάτων καινῶν ἐφιεμένους, which is exactly equivalent to the idiom novarum rerum cupidus or rebus novis studere. The expression is exceedingly common in Greek, but it seems to be always used with the comparative.<sup>27</sup> The only way to escape from the conclusion to which this remarkable departure from a well-established usage leads would be the assumption that the Latinism might have occurred in Cicero's <sup>26</sup> The "orationes consulares," according to Cic. ad Att. II. 1, 3, followed in this order: Two speeches de lege agraria, de Othone, pro Rabirio, de proscriptorum filiis. Plutarch merely omits the fourth, and puts the last of these in first place. As they all belong in one year, the error is not very serious. Again, when Cicero in 63 B.C. defended Otho's lex theatralis, its author may well have been praetor (c. 13), although the law was passed in his tribuneship, in 67 B.C. The fact, however, that he is called Marcus, which was the praenomen of the emperor, instead of Lucius, if not a slip of the pen on the part of Plutarch himself, would certainly point to a source later than the reign of Nero.

<sup>27</sup> e.g. Herod. VII. 6 νεωτέρων ἔργων ἐπιθυμητής Xen. Hell. V. 2, 9 νεωτέρων ἐπιθυμοῦντες πραγμάτων, and similarly νεωτερίζειν. The only exceptions which I have been able to find, in spite of a long and diligent search, occur in Dio Cass. XXXVII. 50, curiously enough also in the account of the Catilinian conspiracy: καιῶν δὲ ποτε πραγμάτων ἐπιθυμητάς, and in Plut. Ant. 9 νέων πραγμάτων δρεγύμενος, but both these passages were undoubtedly based upon Latin authors and the former, in particular, is not surprising in an author who exhibits so many Latinisms as Dio Cassius.

ιπόμημα τῆς ἵπατελας, but this solution of the difficulty must be rejected on the strength of the following passage in Cic. ad. Att. I. 19, 10: commentarium consulatus mei Graece compositum misi ad te, in quo, si quid crit quod homini Attico minus Graecum eruditumque videatur, non dico quod tibi . . . Lucullus de suis historiis dixerat, se quo facilius illas probaret Romani hominis esse idcirco barbara quaedam et σόλοικα dispersisse. Apud me si quid erit eiusmodi me imprudente erit et invito. It is not likely that the man whose cognomen was Atticus would have allowed the σόλοικον in question to pass unnoticed.

The numerous differences between the Greek narrative and Cicero's speeches, and the distinctly derogatory remark in c. 19 already discussed, are, in my judgment, as incompatible with the assumption of direct indebtedness to Tiro's biography as we found them irreconcilable with a first-hand knowledge of Cicero's writings bearing upon this subject.

The 24th chapter, which constitutes a sort of sequel to the preceding story, leading up to the long string of Ciceronian facetiae collected in c. 25–28, is perhaps the most instructive ἐμβλῆμα in the entire biography, for in no other chapter is there such an ostentatious array of authorities, and yet nowhere is the second-hand character of the information more easily demonstrable.

Plutarch begins by saying that Cicero's excessive self-laudation and the exaggerated estimate which he, with nauseating reiteration, placed upon the achievements of his consulship<sup>28</sup> disgusted many and exposed him to attack. The fact is notorious and has found epigrammatic expression in Seneca.<sup>29</sup> But that the effect here attributed to Cicero's self-praise, however repugnant it may have seemed to some later <sup>28</sup> Cp. also the still more emphatic censure of this failing in Comp. Dem. et Cic. c. 2.

<sup>29</sup> de brev. vitae 5, 1, quotiens illum ipsum consulatum suum non sine causa sed sine fine laudatum detestatur. Dio Cass. XXXVIII. 12 expatiates on the subject with his usual anti-Ciceronian bias.

Romans, reflects any actual contemporary feeling, must be seriously questioned, in view of the entire lack of a modest self-restraint which the ancients habitually exhibit when speaking of their own achievements.

Nay more, the very phrase which follows: τὰ βιβλία τελευτῶν κατέπλησε καὶ τὰ συγγράμματα seems to me to reveal a later source, in that the juxtaposition of the two substantives would be intolerably tautological, unless we assume that the collocation was occasioned by the post-Augustan use of liber in the sense of oratio,<sup>30</sup> συγγράμματα<sup>31</sup> appropriately designating the other scripta of Cicero. And, as a matter of fact, we find that of the numerous illustrations of Cicero's readiness to praise not only himself but others as well, which Plutarch introduces by the words ώς ἐκ τῶν συγγραμμάτων λαβεῖν ἔστι, not one, so far as we can still make out, occurs in an oration. The phrase itself, of course, no more proves that Plutarch had himself laboriously selected all these examples from the works of Cicero<sup>32</sup> than the statement of Tac. Germ. 5, est videre apud illos argentea vasa, points to the author's personal presence in Germany.

The same conclusion must be drawn from the confident and sweeping statements contained in the succeeding words of this same chapter: τῶν δὲ μεγάλων καὶ θαυμαστῶν ἐπαίνων οἱς πολλαχοῦ<sup>33</sup> χρῆται περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός and again τῶν δὲ καὶ αὐτὸν ἐνδέξων . . . οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδείς, διν οὐκ ἐποίησεν ἐνδοξότερον ή λέγων ή γράφων εὐμενῶς περὶ ἑκάστου. For if we were to accept the first on Plutarch's own responsibility, it would

<sup>30</sup> Cp. my note to Tac. Dial. 3 (p. 70) and Landwehr in Archiv f. lat. Lexic. VII pp. 223-235.

<sup>31</sup> It is the very term which Cicero himself used for his essays and dialogues. Cp. ad Att. XVI. 6, 4, ex eo (sc. volumine prooemiorum) eligere soleo, cum aliquod σύγγραμμα institui.

<sup>32</sup> The words immediately following πολλὰ δ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπομνημονεύοντι (sc. οἱ περὶ Κικέρωνος γράψαντες) may, indeed, have been intentionally inserted here to forestall such an inference, for they are not necessary to the context.

<sup>33</sup> Some twenty eulogistic references to Demosthenes occur in Cicero's extant writings, and they are widely scattered at that.

involve an absolutely exhaustive knowledge of the opera omnia of Cicero, such as but few Romans could ever have boasted of, while the latter assertion would at the same time imply a most profound acquaintance with the posthumous reputation of the individuals in question, such as the Greek biographer certainly did not possess. Nevertheless scholars have had no scruples in attributing all these items concerning Plato, Aristotle, Theophrastus, and Demosthenes, as well as the information based upon the letters to Herodes, Gorgias, Pelops, and the young Cicero, to Plutarch's perusal of the original passages, though some are not averse to accepting an intermediary source, such as Tiro, as a possible contingency. But that Plutarch was indebted for this learned digression to some later authority — the chapter reminds us of Suetonius at every turn — is made evident by the allusion to certain pedantic critics of Cicero,<sup>84</sup> who took him to task for a disparaging remark concerning Demosthenes, found in his Letters, probably in one addressed to Calvus.<sup>85</sup> Plutarch refutes these obtrectatores Ciceronis by reminding them that they forget to cite or intentionally ignore the μεγάλοι καὶ θαυμαστοὶ ἔπαινοι οἱς πολλαχοῦ χρῆται περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός. Unless all signs fail, we possess in this defense a faint echo of the literary controversies of later scholars, of which Aper's attack upon Cicero in the Tacitean Dialogus may furnish an illustration. This seems to me at least to be a more reasonable supposition than to assume that Tiro had taken occasion to free

<sup>84</sup> Such as Didymus e.g., against whose attack upon Cicero, it will be remembered, Suetonius a hundred years later wrote a separate treatise. Cp. also Tac. Dial. c. 12 plures hodie invenies qui Ciceronis gloriam . . . detrectent and my notes ad loc. (p. 153).

<sup>85</sup> The reference seems to be to the lost correspondence of Cicero with Calvus and Brutus, cited by Quintilian and Tac. Dial. 18, 21 f., where see my note p. 204. That the letter was addressed to Calvus I am inclined to infer from the vagueness of the allusion πρὸς τινα τῶν ἑταίρων ἔθηκεν ἐν ἐπιστολῇ γράψας, for if it had been written to the "well-known" Brutus, his biographer would probably have said so, as in c. 43. Calvus's name occurs nowhere in Plutarch and was presumably unknown to him.

his hero of a charge, in reality too trivial and unjust to be dignified by serious refutation.

Having already discussed the sources of c. 25-27, we may now turn to what may be called the Clodian Episode, in c. 28-35. It is the other long and continuous narrative which, together with the account of the Catilinian Conspiracy, takes up one half of the entire biography. Here, as there, our sources of information are unusually full and varied, for, besides the works of Cicero, Appian<sup>36</sup> and, above all, Dio Cassius<sup>37</sup> have devoted considerable space to the narrative of these stirring times. To them we should add the more or less incidental discussions and references in Asconius Pedianus, Plutarch's Cato Min., Crassus, Pompey, Caesar, and Suetonius's Life of Caesar, not to mention other more scattered allusions. Finally, of accounts now no longer extant, those of Tiro and Livy were probably the most valuable and exhaustive.

Plutarch's narrative, though full of details, is, with few exceptions to be noted presently, in remarkable agreement not only with the testimony of Cicero, but also with that of Dio, who, in the story of the Clodian episode, on the whole exhibits a sympathetic attitude toward the orator, in striking contrast with the almost Mommsenian hostility displayed toward him elsewhere in his history. This circumstance finds its only plausible explanation in the assumption that he did not hate Cicero less but Clodius more, and hence did not hesitate to base his account upon a writer who, though kindly disposed toward Cicero, appealed to him because of the exhaustive character of his treatment. Now Plutarch's account is no less eulogistic, and, in at least one instance, relating to Cicero's timid conduct in the Milonian affair (c. 35), clearly apologetic. This attitude, taken in connection with the unflattering rôle assigned to Terentia in c. 29 and 30, naturally suggests the probability that here at all events Tiro's biography was closely followed by Plutarch; for even the one unqualified censure which he directs against the unmanly conduct of Cicero in exile (c. 32) would not militate against this assumption, inasmuch as the author of the Parallel Lives may have designedly inserted so well-deserved a criticism,<sup>38</sup> in order to point the contrast with the laudable demeanor of Demosthenes under similar circumstances.<sup>39</sup> But the abundant evidence already adduced of Plutarch's independence of Tiro in cases where we should expect him to have been consulted above others, and the undoubtedly unhistorical statement that Terentia's jealousy, caused by her husband's alleged relations with the notorious Clodia, eventually led Cicero by way of exculpation to make an enemy of her equally profligate brother, a story which a Suetonius, we may be sure, would have seized upon with avidity — these considerations, I maintain, render Plutarch's indebtedness to Tiro for the Clodian episode far less plausible than it might seem on superficial analysis. But if any concrete confirmation of this view be thought necessary, it will be found in certain items dealing with Cicero's exile which either contradict the explicit testimony of Cicero or are objectionable on other grounds; for I regard it as self-evident that Tiro could not have erred in matters of detail with which he must have been as familiar as his patron.

Thus, we read in Plut. c. 32 that Cicero was forbidden to take shelter ἐντὸς μιλίων<sup>40</sup> πεντακοσίων Ἰταλίας, whereas we learn from Cic. ad Att. III. 4, in qua (sc. rogatione) erat eiusmodi ut mihi ultra quadringenta milia liceret esse. Again the statement ἐν δὲ Ιππωνίῳ, πόλει τῆς Λευκανίας, ἦν Οὐνθῶνα νῦν καλοῦσιν, Οὐτβῖος, Σικελὸς ἀνήρ, who had been greatly benefited by Cicero, οἰκίᾳ μὲν οὐκ ἐδέξατο, when compared with ad Att. l.c. a Vibone . . . subito discessimus . . . statim iter Brundisium contuli . . . ne et Sicca; apud quem eram, periret, reveal an amazing confusion which cannot be accounted for satisfactorily, if Tiro was Plutarch's source, for the two passages unquestionably relate to the same incident. In the first place, Vibo is a town of Bruttium, not of Lucania, and it was so called in Cicero's day. An individual Vibius, a Sicilian, nowhere occurs in Cicero's works ; on the other hand, Sicca, an old friend, had an estate at Vibo, and he received the exile kindly. Finally, it were passing curious, if one Vibius had lived in a town Vibo which, according to Plutarch's explicit albeit demonstrably erroneous information, had not at the time in question borne that name ! In all likelihood this Sicilian owes his existence to Vibo or one of its inflected forms being taken for the name of an individual. The description of Cicero's departure from Brundisium, his landing at Dyrrachium, the portents which followed, their interpretation by οἱ μαντικοὶ, whose opportune presence is as miraculous as the σημεῖα themselves, — all these items not only constitute, as the λέγεται indeed foreshadows, an ἔμβλημα of different origin from the preceding, but, what is still more important, none of them are found in Cicero's itinerary as given in his Correspondence.

<sup>40</sup> An evident Latinism, as may be observed in passing. Dio Cass. XXXVIII. 17, 6 practically agrees with Plutarch, when he says τρισχιλίους τε γὰρ καὶ ἑπτακοσίους καὶ πεντήκοντα σταδίους ὑπέρ τὴν Ρώμην ὑπερωπίσθη (= ultra CCCXI.XVIII millia passuum Roma exulare iussus est).

The brief paragraph which follows (c. 36) deals with Cicero's proconsulship in Cilicia. It is written in a tone of panegyric, and with the exception of two statements, one of which is significantly introduced by λέγεται, substantially coincides with the extant utterances of Cicero, the closing sentence making, indeed, the impression of a direct paraphrase from one of his letters.<sup>41</sup> Still, as this was written from Rome Jan. 4, 49, after Cicero had been on Italian soil again since Nov. 24, 50, it is incredible that Plutarch had capriciously selected a brief note to Tiro merely to borrow a metaphor, while he overlooked the earlier and more important letters to Atticus (e.g. VII. 4. 5), in which the writer with equal confidence predicts the Civil War. But if the second- or third-hand character of Plutarch's information needed any further confirmation, it would be furnished by the immediately preceding allusion to Cicero's facetious reply to the request of Caelius to send him some panthers; for not only does the answer not strictly coincide with the Latin original,<sup>42</sup> but, what is far more significant, the orator's well known correspondent is styled Caecilius,<sup>43</sup> an amusing blunder which Plutarch cannot, of course, have found either in Cicero's letters or in Tiro, their editor.

The brevity and incidental character of the narrative of the Civil War, from its beginning to the proscription of Cicero (c. 37-47), was naturally due to the fact that throughout this period Cicero, with the memorable exception of the last year of his life, was condemned to complete political inactivity or played but a subordinate rôle, Pompey, Caesar, Brutus, Antony, and finally Octavianus occupying simultaneously or successively the center of the historical stage. The fascinating story of the death struggle of the Republic was told by many illustrious writers whose material, after passing through various channels, found its way into Plutarch's Lives of the protagonists. Only the biographers of Cicero would, therefore, have had any motive or occasion to pay particular attention to his part in the conflict which preceded the assassination of Caesar. Accordingly the chapters under notice are chiefly devoted to the man Cicero, to his personal traits and domestic affairs, only so much of the history of the times being given as was essential to an adequate understanding of his conduct. Hence also the anecdotal and digressive character of these paragraphs, one entire chapter (c. 38) being taken up, as we have seen, with the witticisms of Cicero in Pompey's camp,<sup>44</sup> favorable<sup>45</sup> and unfavorable<sup>46</sup> criticisms standing amicably side by side. Some of these items are not found elsewhere in extant sources, a comparatively late origin being, moreover, highly probable in most of them.

Thus the pleasant story (c. 40)—it is introduced by λέγεται—of the effect of Cicero's eloquence upon Caesar in the case of Ligarius, told with circumstantiality of detail and in Plutarch's best style, is undoubtedly a later embellishment, as may be seen from a comparison with Cicero's own account;<sup>47</sup> for if Caesar's deep emotion had actually manifested itself in the manner related by Plutarch, the orator would hardly have confessed his inability to describe it. In the Greek, Caesar

It is hard for us moderns, who read the pro Ligario in cold print, to realize the emotional effect which it is said to have produced, for that it was a much admired oration is also confirmed by Cic. ad Att. XIII. 12, 2. 19, 2.

had fully made up his mind in advance to condemn Ligarius at all hazards, in the Latin speech he is represented as having been amenable to the pleas of mercy from the start.<sup>48</sup> Again, when Plutarch says τέλος δὲ τῶν κατὰ Φάρσαλον ἀγαμένου τοῦ ῥήτορος ἀγώνων ἐκπαθῆ γενόμενον τιναχθῆναι τῷ σώματι etc., neither he nor the author of the story can have had the extant speech before them, for the only direct allusion to the battle (which, at least to modern feeling, does not even rise to any great heights of pathos) occurs at the beginning rather than at the end!<sup>49</sup> Finally, τὸν γοῦν ἀνθρωπὸν ἀπέλυσε τῆς αἰτίας βεβιασμένος, unless interpreted as an acquittal on the spot, would spoil the effect of the anecdote; and yet, according to Cicero, Caesar reserved his decision, though the advocate left the court room convinced of the ultimate triumph of his client.

The determination of the sources in the closing chapters, which briefly touch upon events of the Civil War, does not fall within the scope of this investigation, as it involves the far larger question concerning the authorities which Plutarch followed in his Lives of Caesar, Pompey, Antony, Brutus, and Cato Minor.

The patient reader who has followed my analysis so far will, I hope, have carried away the conviction that all the evidence is strongly against the universal assumption of Plutarch's direct indebtedness to the numerous authorities belonging to the Ciceronian or early Augustan period; that, in other words, neither the works of Cicero nor the Catiline of Sallust nor the biography of Tiro nor the history of Livy, to mention only the most important, furnished him, at first hand, with any of the material accumulated in his life of the orator. But the foregoing examination has at the same time given abundant positive proofs that numerous details must, for one reason or another, be assigned to a post-Augustan origin, a contingency which Sibinga had timidly suggested in one or two instances, while Leo and Schwartz both seem to imply that the authors whom they postulate as Plutarch's principal source belonged to the same period.

X<sup>a</sup>. But however strong the foundation may be upon which, as I believe I have shown, the above conclusion is based, we cannot as yet rest satisfied with it. We must still inquire, whether it be not also possible to give to this post-Augustan authority of Plutarch "a local habitation and a name."

If we carefully survey the passages in question, his characteristics will combine into the following picture: He was a scholar of exceptional erudition who had an exhaustive first-hand knowledge of the entire literature on his subject, who, though a warm admirer of Cicero, was impartial and objective enough not to exclude such unfavorable criticisms of his hero as he met with in his sources. He was extremely fond of anecdotes, scandalous gossip, and 'bons mots,' a firm believer in dreams and prodigies as premonitions of the future. Not over punctilious in matters chronological nor imbued with a desire to distinguish with scrupulous care the true and the false, he did not weigh the validity of conflicting evidence, everything being grist that came to his mill. Of a philological turn of mind, he had a predilection for certain details and loved to dwell upon the literary manifestations and intellectual characteristics of the individuals whose careers he had set himself to describe. Finally, he must have lived sufficiently far removed in time from Cicero to account on the one hand for the accidental discoloration of many incidents in the orator's life and for the erroneous interpretation of many facts, the usual result of a dimmed historical perspective, and, on the other, to allow for the ivy-growth of biographical fiction, the inevitable penalty which great men pay to posterity for the boon of immortality.

Now there is unquestionably no known scholar of the imperial age who so perfectly fulfills all the above conditions, none whose method of work, no less than the character of whose information, would be more likely to have attracted the author who professed to write Lives not Histories, than Suetonius Tranquillus. And if we further add that he not only wrote a defense of the orator against an attack of Didymus,<sup>1</sup> but also a Life of Cicero, the conclusion, that many of the items in Plutarch which have been shown to be post-Augustan were taken directly from this work of his contemporary, will acquire a very high degree of probability. It will become all but certain, however, if we finally succeed in establishing this indebtedness, so far inferred on internal grounds alone, on the basis of a number of passages in other Latin authors indubitably taken from the Suetonian biography.<sup>2</sup>

Other scholars who have had occasion to touch upon the sources of Plutarch's Cicero have ignored the article. Willrich l.c. p. 36–38, though he devotes a chapter to Suetonius, remains, in consequence, in blissful ignorance of the true state of affairs, as do Leo and Schwartz (ll. cc.). Their conclusions, however, deserve quotation on other grounds. The former (p. 165) says: "Die Biographie ist einheitlich gearbeitet, von einem Manne angelegt der Tiro und wenigstens einen anderen Biographen Cicero's, Cicero's Memoiren und Briefe und, ausser anderem, historische Gewährsmänner heranzog und seinen Standpunkt zwar auf der Cicero freundlichen Seite nahm, aber die Gegner zu Wort kommen liess und selbst tadelte. Plutarch war es gewiss nicht, nennen können wir ihn nicht," and Schwartz p. 602: "Der plutarchische Gewährsmann war kein Politiker und kein Historiker grossen Stils, es war ein sehr belesener Pedant, der keine Leseerfahrung umkommen liess und aus Gutem und Schlechtem, aus Sallust und Cicero, sowie aus der Pamphlet- und Klatschliteratur ein buntes Mosaik zusammenfügte, das bald werthvolles Detail, bald gleichgiltigen Kleinkram, bald giftiges Gerede zu einem seltsamen Bilde vereinigte." My own characterization above, though independently drawn

I refer, in particular, to the items on Roman Literature in St. Jerome's additions to the Chronicle of Eusebius and to the anonymous treatise de viris illustribus, usually printed with the Caesares of S. Aurelius Victor and attributed in the majority of MSS. to Pliny the Younger, while the scholars of the Renaissance, chiefly it would seem misled by the title, identified it with its famous namesake.<sup>3</sup> St. Jerome's obligations to Suetonius are universally admitted, but it does not appear to have been noticed that, whatever the other sources of the de viris illustribus may have been,<sup>4</sup> its eighty-first chapter at all events, which deals with the life of Cicero, was also drawn from the same fountain, though, like the rest of the treatise, it has come down to us only in a horribly epitomized form. I base this conviction not so much upon the identity of the titles or even upon the circumstance that Suetonius's de viris illustribus no less than his Caesares were demonstrably pillaged by later historians who had occasion to treat of the same topics,<sup>5</sup> but rather upon the numerous coincidences existing between the anonymous writer and admittedly Suetonian fragments,<sup>6</sup> in particular those passages up, agrees in all essential particulars with the two sketches just cited. I was, therefore, all the more surprised to find that Suetonius had not sat for the portrait so well painted by the two Göttingen scholars. Suetonius had, indeed, drunk deeply from pure historical fountains, but at the same time he would cast his dragnet far into the murky and polluted waters of tradition, and its rich haul was no less palatable to him. Cp. also, Peck, Suetonius' Lives of Caesar and Augustus, New York 1889, p. x: He can only accumulate with patient industry a vast number of details. Nothing is too unpleasant, nothing too personal to be left unrecorded. concerning Cicero which the Anonymus and St. Jerome have in common.

X<sup>b</sup>. Remembering then that both these writers were alike indebted to Suetonius's de viris illustribus, we may now turn to c. 3 of Plutarch's biography, a paragraph, be it observed, so perfectly coherent, that it must needs have been taken in its entirety from one and the same source.

Now this passage contains at least two errors. The one consists in the implication that the pro Roscio Amerino was the earliest speech of Cicero, whereas it is known that he made his oratorical début with the pro Quinctio in 81 B.C., in the 26th year of his age, the former belonging to the next year.<sup>1</sup> As St. Jerome gives the correct date, it might be argued that Plutarch did not here follow Suetonius; but this inference is neutralized by the second error, to the effect that Cicero after the Roscian trial left for Greece fearing the anger of Sulla, though he alleged ill health as the cause for his sudden departure. This statement flatly contradicts the facts of history, for so far from leaving Rome out of any dread of the dictator the young orator remained in the city for nearly two years more, delivering in the meantime at least two speeches, one for L. Varenus and another in behalf of a woman of Arretium.<sup>2</sup> It must be perfectly clear that such a calumny, or, if you will, misunderstanding, cannot well have arisen until post-Augustan times; and when I add that there are but two authors, besides Plutarch, who are guilty of the same misstatement, namely Hieronymus and the Anonymus,<sup>3</sup> the conclusion that all three are equally indebted to Suetonius's vita Ciceronis will be irresistibly forced upon us,<sup>4</sup> the more so as palpable errors shared in common often furnish a safer clue to interdependence than coincidences in matters of fact.

<sup>1</sup> That Plutarch did not purposely ignore the pro Quinctio, as relating only to a causa privata, is made clear by the fact that the very same error, as Gellius N. A. XV. 28, 1 informs us on the authority of Asconius Pedianus, was shared by Cornelius Nepos and Fenestella: in librorum primo quos de vita illius (sc. Ciceronis) composuit (sc. Longior autem Nepotis quam Fenestellae error est nisi quis vult in animum inducere Nepotem studio amoris et amicitiae adductum amplificandae admirationis gratiae quadriennium suppressisse ut M. Cicero orationem florentissimam dixisse pro Roscio admodum adulescens videretur. Cicero himself makes no distinction between the two causae, where he speaks of his first oratorical efforts. Cp. in Verr. II. 2, 65, 159, tum primum nos ad causas et privatas et publicas adire coepimus.

Plutarch's remarks concerning Cicero's father in c. 1, as the οὐδὲν ἦν πυθέσθαι μέτριον and the οἱ μὲν—οἱ δέ indicate, must have been based upon an author who was wont to collect such traditions, leaving the reader to select what suited his fancy; on the other hand, the calumny involved in ἐν κναφείω τινὶ καὶ γενέσθαι καὶ τραφῆναι τὸν ἄνδρα excludes contemporary biographers and historians.<sup>5</sup> The whole passage has,

<sup>2</sup> Cp. esp. ad Att. I. 19, 4 Arretinos quorum agrum Sulla publicarat neque diviserat, in sua possessione retinebam; pro Caec. 33, 97, (de eadem causa) atque hoc et contra dicente Cotta et Sulla vivo iudicatum est; Brut. 91, 314, sed cum censerem remissione et moderatione vocis et commutato genere dicendi me et periculum vitare posse et temperatus dicere, ut consuetudinem dicendi mutarem, ea causa mihi in Asiam proficisci fuit. Itaque cum essem biennium versatus in causis et iam in foro celebratum meum nomen esset, Roma sum profectus.

<sup>3</sup> Hieronymus: Roscio contra Chrysogonium defenso Cicero Athenascessit et inde post triennium Romam regreditur; de viris illust. 81: Adolescens Rosciano iudicio eloquentiam et libertatem suam adversus Sullanos ostendit ex quo veritus invidiam Athenas studiorum gratia petivit. It will be also noticed that all three authors speak of Athens or Greece (els τὴν Ἑλλάδα) as Cicero's immediate destination, whereas he expressly says that it was Asia.

<sup>4</sup> That no injustice is done to Suetonius by ascribing to him a slanderous statement of this nature is made evident by Suet. Iul. 4, composita seditione civili, Cornelium Dolabellam . . . repetundarum postulavit; absolutoque Rhodum secedere statuit et ad declinandam invidiam et ut per otium et requiem Apollonio Moloni clarissimo tunc dicendi magistro operam daret (cp. Plut. c. 4 and above p. 17). All the circumstances here afford an admirable parallel to the passage of Plutarch, and the motive given for Caesar's departure is as similar as it is unquestionably false.

<sup>5</sup> The same reproach is made by Calenus ap. Dio Cass. XLVI. 4, but this rhetorical invective could at best be only an echo of some contemporary in fact, the true color Suetonianus; and that this impression is not purely subjective is again shown by two passages in Hieronymus and the Anonymus<sup>6</sup> concerning Cicero's alleged royal descent, the statement being also found in Plutarch, but nowhere else in extant sources,<sup>7</sup> while the name of the orator's mother and that of Herennius as one of the murderers of Cicero<sup>8</sup> are preserved only in St. Jerome and Plutarch.

We have already seen that c. 4 could not have been taken from an early authority and it was intimated that Suetonius may well be made responsible for it. This hypothesis will be rendered all but certain by the following consideration. At the close of the chapter, Plutarch relates that Apollonius (Molo), after listening in sullen silence to a Greek oration which Cicero had delivered amid the applause of his fellow pupils, finally, instead of also praising the effort, cried out that he pitied the fate of Greece, in that culture and eloquence, the only glory which still remained to her, would now also be transferred to Rome.<sup>9</sup> This anecdote is nowhere even alluded to by Cicero;<sup>10</sup> there is, indeed, but one other reference to it slander which did not in any case reach Plutarch directly from such remote and early sources.

<sup>7</sup> Unless, indeed, we except Sil. Ital. Pun. VIII. 406, Regia progenies et TULLO sanguis ab alto; XII. 175, Clarum Volscorum Tulli decus. Its origin may be due to a jesting remark of Cicero, Tusc. I. 16, 38, Pherecydes Syrius . . . antiquus sane; fuit enim meo regnante gentili. Cp. Brut. 16, 62, ut si ego me a M'. Tullio esse dicerem qui patricius cum Servio Sulpicio consul anno X post exactos reges fuit.

<sup>10</sup> That it was, in fact, unknown to him appears from Brut. 91, 316: ibi me ad . . . Molonem applicavi . . . in notandis animadvertisque vitiis . . . prudentissimum. Is dedit operam (si modo id consequi potuit) ut nimis redundantes nos et superfluentes . . . reprimeret et quasi extra ripas diffluentes coerceret.

in extant sources, and curiously it is found in none other than in the vita of the Anonymus, who mentions it, moreover, in precisely the same connection, for after speaking of Cicero's studies at Athens (cited above) he continues as follows : Inde eloquentiae gratia Asiam, post Rhodum petiti, ubi Molonem . . . magistrum habuit qui flesse dicitur quod per hunc Graecia eloquentiae laude privaretur. In view of the interdependence between the Anonymus, Plutarch, and Suetonius already established, this parallelism must be regarded as adding but another link in the chain of evidence for Plutarch's direct indebtedness to Suetonius's vita Ciceronis.<sup>11</sup>

Plutarch's statement (c. 46, λέγεται) concerning the alleged reluctance of Octavian to sacrifice Cicero leads to the same conclusion. This transparent fiction, designed by apologists to clear the founder of the empire of one of the darkest stains in his entire career, is first met with in a famous passage of Velleius,<sup>12</sup> though it doubtless did not originate with him. Thereafter, excepting Plutarch, I have been able to find but two passages which imply a knowledge of this apology, for, strange as it may seem, neither Appian nor Dio make any allusion to it.<sup>13</sup> The one occurs in our anonymous vita: cum triumviros se fecissent Caesar, Lepidus Antoniusque concordia

<sup>11</sup> An incidental remark in Suet. de rhet. 1, Cicero ad praeturam usque etiam Graece declamitavit, Latine vero senior quoque et quidem cum consulibus Hirio et Pansa, may show that he was not likely to have neglected a discussion of Cicero's rhetorical studies in his biography.

<sup>12</sup> II. 66, 1, repugnante Caesare sed frustra adversus duos, instauratum Sullani exempli malum, proscriptio. Nihil tam indignum illo tempore fuit quam quod aut Caesar aliquem proscribere coactus est aut ab ullo Cicero proscriptus est etc.

<sup>13</sup> Unless App. B. C. IV. 51, ἐς ἀπολογίαν τῆς Κικέρωνος ἐκδόσεως . . . ὑπαρον (sc. ἀπέφηνε τὸν νῖδον τοῦ Κικέρωνος) be so construed. Their silence may either have been due to their well-known hostility to Cicero which blinded them to the reprehensibility of Octavian's conduct, or, what seems more probable, their sources were still ignorant of this particular attempt to whitewash the emperor. Livy's famous comment can, of course, be interpreted only as a quasi justification of Antony. Cp. Liv. ap. Sen. Suas. VI. 22, quae (sc. mors Ciceronis) vere aestimanti minus indigna videri potuit quod a victore inimico (sc. Antonio) nil crudelius passus est quam quod eiusdem fortunae compoti fecisset.

non aliter visa est inter eos iungi posse nisi Tullius necaretur, the other in — Suetonius Aug. 27, in quo (sc. triumvirato) restituit quidem aliquamdiu collegis ne qua fieret proscriptio sed inceptam utroque acerbius exercuit. The latter statement is thereupon substantiated by numerous illustrations, whereas the tradition of Augustus's previous reluctance is allowed to stand by itself. This circumstance would be most plausibly explained by the assumption that Suetonius had already discussed it elsewhere; but this was most appropriately done in his narrative of the death of Cicero, the most noted victim of the proscription.

In the light of these passages, pointing as they all do in one and the same direction, another fact which a comparison between Plutarch and the anonymous vita reveals now at once assumes a peculiar significance. The latter contains thirty-six items of information. Of these all are met with in the Greek narrative,<sup>14</sup> and, with two exceptions, in the identical chronological order.<sup>15</sup> As an isolated observation, this coincidence

<sup>15</sup> Quaestor — Aedilis — Praetor Ciliciam latrociniis liberavit — Consul. If the italicized sentence were sound, praetor would be absurd and the chronological sequence of events, otherwise strictly observed throughout, rudely destroyed. Two solutions of the difficulty suggest themselves. (a) Some words like fuit eodem tempore quo Pompeius dropped out after praetor, the temporal coincidence being sufficiently close (67, 66) to have caused the two to be mentioned together, particularly as Cicero's praetorship was not marked by any conspicuous achievement. (b) The allusion is to Cicero's proconsulship in Cilicia, in 51 B.C. This is rendered probable, because otherwise all reference to his victorious campaign would be wanting. It is also not without significance that Plutarch and the Latin vita would here again alone coincide, in that both speak of Cicero's iusta Victoria as a defeat of a band of robbers. If so, the words Ciliciam etc. may have been accidentally omitted, then placed in the margin, opposite Siciliam, owing to its graphical similarity to Ciliciam. Subsequently they intruded into the text in the wrong place, causing a conflation of two passages, but the resulting blunder was not noticed, because the retention of praetor did not disturb the regular sequence of the cursus honorum. Whether the confusion was due to a later scribe or to the epitomator, whose condensation of the original has here, in fact, been so merciless as to leave little more than bald chapter-headings, I do not venture to determine. — The other disagreement would possess no argumentative validity whatever ; but when it is taken in connection with the preceding discussion, the inference that the anonymous vita and Plutarch's biography were alike based upon Suetonius will appear not merely plausible, but unavoidable and convincing.

Xc. So far we were compelled to invoke the aid of authors under demonstrable obligations to Suetonius to prove Plutarch's indebtedness to him. In the following passage an extant utterance of Suetonius himself will, I hope, enable us to reach the same goal, although the road to it is a long one and obstructed with difficulties. I refer to the Dream of Cicero, related at length and with picturesque details by Plutarch in c. 44. It is a digression, abundantly marked as such by an ἐδόκει, a ως ἔστι, and a φαστ̄ in two places. While Pompey and Caesar were still alive, the orator dreamed that the sons of senators had been summoned to the Capitoline hill, Jupiter intending to choose from out their number the future ruler of Rome. They all passed in review before him, whereupon he selected one boy and, taking him by the right hand, said : "This one, O Romans, as your ruler will put an end to the Civil Wars." Going down to the Campus Martius next day, among some boys at exercise Cicero's eyes fell first of all upon the very lad whom he had beheld in his dream. Amazed at this, he inquired about the boy's parents and learned that he was the son of one Octavius, a man not of noble descent, and of Attia, and that Julius Caesar was his uncle. By a curious coincidence also he was born in the very year of Cicero's consulship.<sup>1</sup> These circumstances prompted him to occurs in a digression in c. 20. Plutarch there says that Cicero at an early date suspected Caesar of monarchical designs ; the same prescience is attributed to him in the vita, but in connection with the Clodian episode. The only other extant writer to confirm this is — Suetonius (Caes. 14) who cites a letter of Cicero to that effect. See note to text (§ 46<sup>b</sup>).

<sup>1</sup> Suet. Aug. 94 and Dio Cass. XLV. 2, in placing the birth of Augustus not only in the same year, but on the very day and hour of the famous senate meeting which decided the fate of the conspirators, show that the synchronistic pay assiduous court to the youth, and at a later period they were alleged as the reason, or rather the pretext, for Cicero's efforts to win the favor of Octavianus.

Now the question as to Plutarch's authority for this story, granting that it originally came from the living lips of Cicero and was not a transparent fiction ex eventu, might appear on first glance to be most satisfactorily answered by Tertull. de anima c. 46, M. Tullius Cicero civilium turbinum cultorem de somnio<sup>2</sup> narrat quod in vitae illius commentariis conditum, particularly as Plutarch expressly quotes these very Memoirs in one place<sup>3</sup> and evidently alludes to them in another passage<sup>4</sup> of his biography of Cicero. And yet, even if we were to admit, what is after all extremely doubtful,<sup>5</sup> that Plutarch himself perused the thirteen books de vita sua,<sup>6</sup> the statement that Octavian's father was τῶν οὐκ ἄγαν ἐπιφανῶν cannot well have been taken from this source, although the emperor did not, like some of his panegyrical biographers, trace his descent back to Tarquinius Priscus.<sup>7</sup> The real difficulties method, so dear to the ancients, had as yet lost little of its fatal fascination. Cp. Vell. Pat. II. 36, 1, consulatui Ciceronis non mediocre adiecit decus natus eo anno divus Augustus, and above p. 31<sup>7</sup>.

begin, however, when we examine the two other references to this incident, preserved in Suetonius and Dio Cassius. It will be necessary to cite them in full.

family likeness between it and the opening chapter of Plutarch, which has already been proved on independent grounds to have been based upon Suetonius's vita Ciceronis. Here, as in the case of Augustus, evidently τερπτοῦ πατρὸς οὐδὲν ἡν τυθέσθαι μέτριον. Cf. also Suet. Vitell. 1, Vitelliorum originem aliam et quidem diversissimam tradunt, partim veterem et nobilem, partim vero novam et obscuram atque etiam sordidam etc.; Vesp. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Suetonius never loses an opportunity to report such predictions. Cp. also Serv. ad Aen. VI. 799, Suetonius ait in vita Caesaris (in the now lost opening chapter) responsa esse data per totum orbem nasci invictum imperatorem, and Suet. Vesp. 5. The similar passage in Plut. Cic. 2, τὴ δὲ τίτη φάσμα δοκεῖ γενέσθαι καὶ προειπεῖν ωἱς θελος μέγα πᾶσι Πωμαλοις ἐκτρεφούσῃς etc. has, therefore, like the rest of the paragraph, a strong Suetonian flavor.

<sup>9</sup> It will be observed that the birth of Octavian in the year of Cicero's consulship is in Plutarch referred to in close connection with the dream.

pristinae noctis familiaribus forte narrabat: puerum facie liberali, demissum e caelo catena aurea, ad fores Capitolii constitisse eique Iovem flagellum tradidisse; deinde repente Augusto viso quem ignotum plerisque adhuc avunculus Caesar ad sacrificandum acciverat, affirmavit ipsum esse cuius imago secundum quietem sibi obversata sit.

Dio Cass. XLV. 2 after relating four of the five ‘prodigia’ given by Suetonius, including the prediction of Nigidius, likewise continues with the story of the dreams:

Παιδίσκου τε αὐτοῦ δύντος καὶ τὴν διατριβὴν ἐν τῇ Ῥώμῃ ποιουμένου ἔδοξέ ποτε ὁ Κικέρων δυναρ, ἀλλύσεσί τε αὐτὸν χρυσαῖς ἐς τὸ Καπιτώλιον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καθιμῆσθαι καὶ μάστιγα παρὰ τοῦ Διὸς εἰληφέναι· καὶ (οὐ γὰρ ἡπίστατο δύτις ἦν) περιέτυχε τε αὐτῷ τῆς ὑστεραίας ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ Καπιτωλίῳ καὶ γνωρίσας αὐτὸν διηγήσατο τοῖς παροῦσι τὴν δύψιν. ὅ τε Κατούλος, οὐδ' αὐτός που ἐώρακὼς τὸν Ὀκταούιον, ἐνόμισε τοὺς παῖδας ἐν τοῖς ὕπνοις τοὺς εὐγενεῖς πάντας ἐν τῷ Καπιτωλίῳ πρόσοδον πρὸς τὸν Δία πεποιησθαι καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ τὸν θεὸν εἰκόνα τινὰ τῆς Ῥώμης ἐς τὸν ἐκείνου κόλπον ἐμβεβληκέναι. ἐκπλαγεὶς δὲ ἐπὶ τούτῳ, ἀνήλθεν ἐς τὸ Καπιτώλιον προσευξόμενος τῷ θεῷ· καὶ ἐκεῖ τὸν Ὀκταούιον εὑρὼν ἄλλως ἀναβεβηκότα, τό τε εἶδος αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸ ἐνύπνιον προσήρμοσε καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν τῆς δύψεως ἐβεβαιώσατο. He then proceeds, again precisely as in Suetonius,<sup>10</sup> μετὰ τοῦτο . . . τίνι τε ἐσθῆτα τὴν ἀνδρικὴν ἐνδύντος, ὁ χιτών περιερράγη τε ἐκατέρωθεν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐπωμίδων καὶ μέχρι τῶν ποδῶν κατερρύῃ. τοῦτο αὐτὸ μὲν καθ' ἑαυτὸ οὐχ ὅπως τέκμαρσίν τινα, ὡς καὶ ἀγαθὸν τι προσημαῖνον, ἔφερεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡγίασε τοὺς παρόντας. . . . ἐπελθὸν δὲ τῷ Ὀκταούιῳ εἰπεῖν, ὅτι τὸ ἀξίωμα τὸ βουλευτικὸν πᾶν ὑπὸ τὸν πόδας μου σχήσω . . . ἐξ οὖν τούτων ὁ Καῖσαρ μεγάλα ἐπ' αὐτῷ ἐλπίσας . . . ἐπὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἤσκει Dio, as is generally admitted, handles his borrowed material with considerable freedom, expanding or condensing to suit his purpose ; accordingly we meet with some items in the above narrative which he could not have found in Suetonius, although the coincidences between them are otherwise remarkably close and numerous. Now, unless we are prepared to regard all the accretions in question as emanating from Dio himself, the resemblance just pointed out must be attributed to a common third source, such as the Θεολογούμενα of Asclepiades Mendes perhaps, whom Suetonius expressly cites as one of his authorities, for it cannot be denied that the story of the dream might also have found an appropriate place in such a work. The further inference, however, that Plutarch may be likewise indebted to this "συναγωγὴ θαυμασίων," since all direct obligations to Augustus's ὑπομνήματα are out of the question, must be rejected the moment we analyze the passages in Dio, Suetonius, and Plutarch a little more closely. In the first place, it must be noted that the account of the last named differs in essential particulars and in the very setting from the narrative of the others. Then again, Plutarch omits Catulus altogether, though some of the details of Cicero's dream are incorporated by Suetonius and Dio in the dream which they attribute to Catulus, Dio, moreover, to make matters worse, in his turn combining some features of both dreams.

Tertullian unfortunately fails to inform us how the orator's dream was related in the emperor's Memoirs,<sup>11</sup> nor can we gather from his silence that no mention at all was made of the similar experience of Catulus. Now, as Suetonius demonstrably made a most extensive use of Augustus's autobiography and yet tells an essentially different story, two possible solutions suggest themselves. Either Plutarch, through an oversight or intentionally, substituted Cicero for Catulus who, if known to him at all, may have appeared too unimportant an individual for his purpose, or else Suetonius related the anecdote differently in his Cicero and in his Augustus. In the one, following some such authority as Asclepiades or Iulius Marathus,<sup>12</sup> he gave it as we read it in the extant biography; in the other, adopting the version of Augustus's own narrative, he told it as we find it in Plutarch. I believe that the latter alternative more accurately represents the actual state of affairs, a conviction confirmed by the remark of Suetonius l.c. Quidam prius somnium Catuli aliter exponunt etc. For, just as we here learn that Catulus was credited with two dreams on the same subject during successive nights, but that tradition varied as to the contents of the first, so we may plausibly conjecture that a dream which some attributed to Catulus was by others assigned to Cicero, and that the latter version had been accepted by Suetonius in his Life of Cicero and thus transmitted to Plutarch; the interval of time which separated the two Latin biographies, as well as the various sources consulted by Suetonius, being quite sufficient to account for the divergences in question.

X<sup>d</sup>. Having thus established Plutarch's indebtedness to Suetonius's vita Ciceronis with the aid of the Suetonian material still extant, we shall now be methodically justified in assigning to the same source those portions of Plutarch's biography for which in a majority of instances we were compelled on internal grounds to assume a post-Augustan origin, provided they at the same time clearly exhibit the well-known characteristics of Suetonius.

Now the items which completely satisfy the aforesaid conditions are above all those pertaining to the personal or strictly biographical traits of Cicero<sup>1</sup> for which, as we have seen, Tiro had hitherto, though on insufficient grounds or positively erroneous surmises, been regarded as the fons primarius of Plutarch. To be more specific, I maintain, and I hope the preceding discussion has justified the claim, that the following topics were taken by Plutarch directly from Suetonius's vita Ciceronis:

The information concerning the parentage, the name (c. 1), the birth and the early youth of Cicero, the statement about his poetic effusions (c. 2 and 40), the criticism passed upon them (c. 2), the entire contents of c. 5, the stray notes on Cicero's property (c. 5. 6) and on the state of his health (c. 8). Furthermore, the learned digression concerning Cicero's self-glorification and eulogy of others (c. 24), the alleged origin of his feud with Clodius (c. 27), the philological comment on Cicero's merits in enriching the Latin language by the coinage of philosophical terms (c. 40) and the remark on Cicero's design to write a Roman History (c. 41), the story of his matrimonial troubles (c. 41), and finally the narrative of his proscription and assassination (c. 46–49).

That the important events in the career of Cicero which in Plutarch are intimately associated with his forensic activity, such as the trial of Verres, the attack upon the agrarian legislation of Rullus, the affairs of Manilius and Milo, also received adequate treatment at the hands of Suetonius goes without saying. Now, as the Greek author in all these instances did not, as we have shown, draw from the original fountain, the inference, that he here too had recourse to the same authority whom he followed so extensively elsewhere, will not be rejected as intrinsically improbable.

<sup>1</sup> That a few of these may have reached Plutarch through oral channels or may represent the gleanings of his own casual reading, whether reproduced from memory or from his notebook, is all but certain (cp. e.g. c. 6. 49, 3 πυνθάνομαι etc.), especially in the case of anecdotal topics. But the material collected from such quarters could not have been sufficiently extensive to invalidate the above contention. See p. 4.

For the strictly historical events, in particular the Catilinian conspiracy, I am rather inclined to postulate some post-Augustan authority whose attitude was distinctly favorable to Cicero and who was in possession of all the contemporary sources on the subject, but who made no attempt to reconcile the manifold differences or traditions which had arisen in the lapse of time. The Clodian episode on the other hand, though also of one piece and hence not to be distributed among several sources, may well have been treated in Suetonius; at least, the story of the origin of the feud and the rôle assigned to Terentia (c. 29), as well as the account of the exile and the return of Cicero, are quite in his manner, not to mention that Plutarch quite fails to grasp the deeper political significance of events, but merely chronicles, again more Suetoniano, the bald facts.

On the basis of two passages of Aulus Gellius<sup>2</sup> and Servius,<sup>3</sup> Reifferscheid has with considerable ingenuity attempted to vindicate to Suetonius a work, entitled Historia bellorum civilium, which comprised the events from Pompey's defeat of the pirates (67 B.C.) to the battle of Actium (31 B.C.). This history, which, according to the same scholar, was also consulted by Dio Cassius and St. Jerome, would thus practically have included the entire career of Cicero, and as such might have been Plutarch's source for the historical portions just discussed, as well as for those relating to the Civil War proper (49–31), in which case Suetonius would have been relieved of the necessity of treating the same occurrences at length in his Life of Cicero. This enticing theory, however, stands and falls with the initial hypothesis of Reifferscheid. But, as he has unfortunately utterly failed to establish its verisimilitude,<sup>4</sup> no inferences of any value can be drawn from it for the solution of the problem before us.

There is no reason to believe that Suetonius treated of these events at any greater length in his Life of Cicero, they being more or less incidental to it, than Plutarch felt called upon to do, particularly as historical narrative was not Suetonius's forte. There would, therefore, be no obstacle to the assumption that Plutarch here too was content to follow in the footsteps of the Roman biographer, were it not for the fact that the other Lives alluded to above (p. 41. 46) prove that he had secured and utilized an exhaustive account of the Civil Wars, it being unlikely that this was as yet unknown to him when he composed his Cicero which preceded them in time.<sup>5</sup>

But be this as it may, we shall at any rate be justified in contending on the strength of the foregoing analysis that Plutarch did not consult at first hand any of the works of Cicero or any pre-Augustan authorities, such as Sallust, Tiro, or Nepos, but that the vita Ciceronis of Suetonius constituted his principal source. In fact, I feel convinced that if the last named were extant we should discover that their interdependence was essentially similar to that which obtains between Plutarch's Coriolanus and the corresponding narrative of Dionysius, whom the biographer followed even in those cases where an ενιοί φασίν would naturally suggest some other sources of information.

<sup>5</sup> On the chronological sequence of Plutarch's Lives, see Michaelis, de ordine vitarum parall. Plutarchi, Berlin 1875. The vita Ciceronis is later than that of Sulla; but as this, according to c. 21, cannot have been published before 115 A.D., we have a terminus post quem for the Life of Cicero. Now Plin. Epist. V. 10 (105 A.D.), as is generally admitted, alludes to the de viris illustribus of Suetonius, and asks him not to withhold them any longer from the public. There will, therefore, be no chronological difficulty in the way of Plutarch's indebtedness to this work, even if we agree with Macé l.c. p. 66-72 on so late a date as 113 A.D. for its appearance, particularly as all of its five parts were not necessarily issued together.

APPENDIX I

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The division of the Greek text into paragraphs and sub-paragraphs is designed to distinguish more clearly than is done by the traditional chapter-numbers the constituent parts into which the biography may be resolved.

The foot-notes do not aim to give an even adequately complete Source Commentary, but are chiefly intended to refute by an accumulation of examples the opinion now generally held, and discussed in the preceding pages, that Plutarch directly consulted the works of Cicero or any other contemporary authority, such as Sallust, for biographical purposes.

The more important passages are cited under two rubrics. Those under (A) designate substantial agreement with Plutarch, those under (D) disagreement in whole or in part.

All source-references in the text are spaced.

The text is that of Sintenis, with the following exceptions:

- c. 2, 5 S. ημέρα . . . Καλανδῶν exhibits a hopeless confusion, primarily caused by Plutarch's misreading novas for nonas. Καλανδῶν is probably an explanatory gloss due to a misunderstanding of ante diem III. Nonas, the month having been omitted. See c. 2 note 4. The soundness of the text can be vindicated only on the supposition that Pl. followed the Greek method of reckoning and that novae Kalendae was used for the Kalends of January, but for this I can find no evidence.
- c. 4, 17. καὶ τολλή is bracketed because the words contradict c. 3, 29, ἡ φωνὴ τολλή μὲν καὶ ἀγαθή. The double τολλά (ll. 18, 19) is probably responsible for the addition.
- c. 5, 23. The absurd νοσήσας has been changed to νοήσας. See my note, Class. Rev. XIV (1900) p. 62.
- c. 7, 25. Βέρρην γὰρ . . . καλοῦσιν clearly belongs after ἔφη δὲ Κικέρων.
- c. 23, 22. ἐκείνων with some MSS. for ἐκείνουν, for the ἐξουσία of the praetor Caesar and the tribune Cato was not ἴση.
- c. 29, 16. I have introduced my emendation διὰ Κατόλλου for διὰ Τύλλου. Compare Amer. Jour. of Phil. XI pp. 316 ff.
- Συγκρ. 1, 4. I write Καιλίου for Κεκιλίου, but retain the latter reading, though equally erroneous, in c. 36, for the reasons given on p. 44.

My thanks are due to my friend and colleague Prof. Wm. N. Bates for his kindness in reading the proof of these pages.

PLUTARCH'S LIFE OF CICERO

1. I. Κικέρωνος δὲ τὴν μὲν μητέρα<sup>1</sup> λέγουσιν Ἐλβίαν καὶ γεγονέναι καλῶς καὶ βεβιωκέναι. Περὶ δὲ τοῦ πατρὸς οὐδὲν ἦν πυθέσθαι μέτριον. Οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἐν κναφείῳ<sup>2</sup> τινὶ καὶ γενέσθαι καὶ τραφῆναι τὸν ἄνδρα λέγουσιν, οἱ δὲ εἰς Τύλλον<sup>3</sup> Αττιον ἀνάγουσι τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ γένους, βασιλεύσαντα λαμπρῶς ἐν Ονδούσκοις<sup>4</sup> καὶ πολεμήσαντα Ῥωμαίοις οὐκ ἀδυνάτως.

2. Οἱ μέντοι πρώτοι ἐκ τοῦ γένους Κικέρων ἐπονομασθεῖς ἄξιος λόγου δοκεῖ γενέσθαι, διὸ τὴν ἐπίκλησιν οὐκ ἀπέρρυψαν οἱ μετ' αὐτὸν, ἀλλ' ἡσπάσαντο, καίπερ ὑπὸ πολλῶν χλευαζομένην. Κίκερα γάρ οἱ Λατίνοι τὸν ἐρέβινθον καλοῦσι, κάκενος ἐν τῷ πέρατι τῆς ρίνὸς διαστολήν, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἀμβλεῖαν εἶχεν, ὥσπερ ἐρεβίνθον διαφνήν, ἀφ' ἧς ἐκτήσατο τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν. Αὐτός γε μὴν Κικέρων, ὑπὲρ οὖν τόδε γέγραπται, τῶν φίλων αὐτὸν οἰομένων δεῖν, ὅτε πρῶτον ἀρχὴν μετήιε καὶ πολιτεύεις ἡπτετο, φυγεῖν τοῦνομα καὶ μεταθέσθαι, λέγεται νεανιευσάμενος εἴπειν, ὡς ἀγωνιεῖται τὸν Κικέρωνα τῶν Σκαίρων καὶ τῶν Κάτλων ἐνδοξότερον ἀποδεῖξαι. Ταμεύων δὲν Σικελίᾳ καὶ τοῖς θεοῖς ἀνάθημα ποιούμενος ἀργυροῦν τὰ μὲν πρώτα δύο τῶν ὄνομάτων ἐτέγραψε, τόν τε Μάρκον καὶ τὸν Τύλλιον, ἀντὶ δὲ τοῦ τρίτου σκώπτων ἐρέβινθον ἐκέλευσε παρὰ τὰ γράμματα τὸν τεχνίτην ἐντορεύσαι. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν περὶ τοῦ ὀνόματος ἴστορηται.

3. II. Τεχθῆναι δὲ Κικέρωνα λέγουσιν ἀνωδόνως καὶ ἀπόνως λοχευθέοντος αὐτοῦ τῆς μητρὸς ἡμέρᾳ τρίτῃ τῶν νέων Καλανδῶν<sup>5</sup>,<sup>6</sup> ἐν ᾧ νῦν οἱ ἀρχοντές εὑχονται καὶ θύσουσιν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος.

Τῇ δὲ τίτῃ φάσμα δοκεῖ γενέσθαι καὶ προειπεῖν ὡς ὅφελος μέγα πᾶσι Ῥωμαίοις ἐκτρεφούσῃ.

Ταῦτα δὲ ἄλλως ὀνείρατα καὶ φλύαρον εἶναι δοκοῦντα ταχέως αὐτὸς ἀπέδειξε μαντείαν ἀλληθινὴν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ τοῦ μανθάνειν γενόμενος, δι' εὐφυτῶν ἐκλάμψας καὶ λαβὼν ὄνομα καὶ δόξαν ἐν τοῖς παισί, ὥστε τοὺς πατέρας αὐτῶν ἐπιφοιτᾶν τοῖς διδασκαλείοις ὅψει τε βουλομένους ὕδειν τὸν Κικέρωνα καὶ τὴν ὑμνουμένην αὐτοῦ περὶ τὰς μαθήσεις ὀξύτητα καὶ σύνεσιν ἴστορηται,

The chief extant narratives of the Conspiracy (c. 10-23) are: Cic. in Cat.; Sallust; Appian B. C. II. 2-7; Dio Cass. XXXVII. 24-42; Florus IV. 1 ff. Cp. also the special treatises cited in the Bibliography and Sibinga l.c. pp. 48-143. In the following those passages will be preferably cited which show that neither Sallust nor Cicero was directly consulted by Plutarch, noteworthy divergences from Cicero's statements in the Speeches proving by implication that the lost ὑπέμνημα was also not one of his sources.

<sup>2</sup> (D) Plutarch ignores the so-called first Catilinarian conspiracy, so frequently referred to in Cicero's speeches, and narrated by Sall. 18; Dio XXV. 44.

<sup>3</sup> (A) Sall. c. 5 animus audax, subdolus, varius; in Cat. II. 5; III. 17 tam acer quam paratus, tam audax quam callidus etc.

(D) Cat. I. 10, 26; II. 4, 7 ff.; esp. Sall. c. 15 necato filio.

ἔδοσαν καὶ καταθύσαντες ἄνθρωπον ἐγεύσαντο τῶν σαρκῶν.<sup>1</sup> Διέφθαρτο δ' ὑπ' αὐτοῦ πολὺ μέρος τῆς ἐν τῇ πόλει κεύτητος,<sup>2</sup> ἥδονὰς καὶ πότους καὶ γυναικῶν ἔρωτας ἀεὶ προξενοῦντος ἐκάστῳ καὶ τὴν εἰς ταῦτα δαπάνην ἀφειδῶς παρασκευάζοντος. Ἐπήρτο δ' ἡ τε Τυρρηνία πρὸς ἀπόστασιν ὅλη καὶ τὰ πολλὰ τῆς ἐντὸς Ἀλπεων Γαλατίας. Ἐπισφαλέστατα δ' ἡ Ῥώμη πρὸς μεταβολὴν εἶχε διὰ τὴν ἐν ταῖς οὐσίαις ἀνωμαλίᾳν, τῶν μὲν ἐν δόξῃ μάλιστα καὶ φρονήματι κατεπτωχευμένων εἰς θέατρα καὶ δεῖπνα καὶ φιλαρχίας καὶ οἰκοδομίας, τῶν δὲ πλούτων εἰς ἀγεννεῖς καὶ ταπεινοὺς συνερρυηκότων ἄνθρωποις, ὥστε μικρᾶς ὁπῆς δεῖσθαι τὰ πράγματα καὶ παντὸς εἶναι τοῦ τολμήσαντος ἐκστῆσαι τὴν πολιτείαν αὐτὴν ὑφ' αὐτῆς νοσοῦνταν.<sup>3</sup>

XI. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ βουλόμενος ὁ Κατιλίνας ἰσχυρόν τι προκαταλαβεῖν ὄρμητήριον ὑπατείαν μετήσει· καὶ λαμπρὸς ἦν ταῖς ἐλπίσιν<sup>4</sup> ὡς Γάϊος Ἀντωνίῳ συνυπατεύσων, ἀνδρὶ καθ' αὐτὸν μὲν οὔτε πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον οὔτε πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον ἡγεμονικῷ, προσθήκη δ' ἄγοντος ἐτέρου δυνάμεως ἐσομένῳ. Ταῦτα δὴ τῶν καλῶν καὶ ἀγαθῶν οἱ πλειστοὶ προαισθόμενοι τὸν Κικέρωνα προῆγον ἐπὶ τὴν ὑπατείαν· καὶ τοῦ δήμου δεξαμένου προθύμως ὁ μὲν Κατιλίνας ἔξεπεσε, Κικέρων δὲ καὶ Γάϊος Ἀντώνιος ἥρεθησαν. <sup>1</sup> Plutarch's authority, knowing that Cicero delivered a speech pro Othone in this year, erroneously connected it with the promulgation of Otho's lex theatralis, four years previous (67 B.C.). See p. 37<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> It has been supposed that this motive, not elsewhere attributed to the conspirators, was devised by Cicero, who in his Memoirs desired to compliment Pompey. But this view is refuted by his cold reception of the long account of the Conspiracy which Cicero sent to him (see p. 88), for Cicero would hardly have been more complimentary to Pompey in a treatise intended for the general public than in a personal letter addressed to him. 37. Διὸ τὴν ἡμέραν τῶν ἀρχαιεσιῶν ὑπερθέμενος δὲ Κικέρων ἐκάλει τὸν Κατιλίναν εἰς τὴν σύγκλητον καὶ περὶ τῶν λεγομένων ἀνέκρινεν. Ὁ δὲ πολλοὺς οἰόμενος εἶναι τοὺς πραγμάτων καινῶν ἐφιεμένους<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῷ βουλῇ, καὶ ἄμα τοῦς συνωμόταις ἐνδεικνύμενος, ἀπεκρίνατο τῷ Κικέρωνι μανικήν ἀπόκρισιν. “Τί γάρ,” ἔφη, “πράττω δεινόν, εἰ, δυέν σωμάτων ὅντων, τοῦ μὲν ἰσχυοῦ καὶ κατεφθινηκότος, ἔχοντος δὲ κεφαλήν, τοῦ δὲ ἀκεφάλου μέν, ἰσχυροῦ δὲ καὶ μεγάλου, τούτῳ κεφαλὴν αὐτὸς ἐπιτίθημι;”<sup>2</sup> Τούτων εἴς τε τὴν βουλὴν καὶ τὸν δῆμον ἥνιγμένων ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ, μᾶλλον δὲ Κικέρων ἔδεισε, καὶ τεθωρακισμένον αὐτὸν οἵ τε δυνατοὶ πάντες ἀπὸ τῆς οἰκίας καὶ τῶν νέων πολλοὶ κατήγαγον εἰς τὸ πεδίον. <sup>4</sup> (D) Sall. c. 48 knows nothing of this nocturnal visit, but mentions the name of the informer (Tarquinius), and is at pains to exculpate Crassus of any complicity in the plot.

XVII. Τοὺς δὲ ὑπολειφθέντας ἐν τῇ πόλει τῶν διεφθαρμένων ὑπὸ τοῦ Κατιλίνα συνῆγε καὶ παρεθάρρυνε Κορηνήλιος Λέντλος Σούρας ἐπίκλησιν, ἀνὴρ γένους μὲν ἐνδόξου, βεβιωκὼς δὲ φαίλως καὶ δι' ἀσέλγειαν ἐξεληλαμένος τῆς βουλῆς πρότερον, τότε δὲ στρατηγῶν τὸ δεύτερον, ὡς ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς ἀνακτωμένοις τὸ βουλευτικὸν ἀξίωμα.

39. Λέγεται δὲ καὶ τὴν ἐπίκλησιν αὐτῷ γενέσθαι τὸν Σούραν ἐξ αἰτίας τοιαύτης. Ἐν τοῖς κατὰ Σιύλλαν χρόνοις ταμιεύων συχνὰ τῶν δημοσίων χρημάτων ἀπώλεσε καὶ διέφθειρεν. Ἀγανακτοῦντος δὲ τοῦ Σιύλλα καὶ λόγον ἀπαιτοῦντος ἐν τῇ συγκλήτῳ, προελθὼν ὀλιγώρως πάνυ καὶ καταφρονητικῶς λόγον μὲν οὐκ ἔφη διδόναι, παρέχειν δὲ τὴν κνήμην, ὥσπερ εἰώθεισαν οἱ παῖδες, δταν ἐν τῷ σφαρίζειν ἀμάρτωσιν. Ἐκ τούτου Σούρας παρωνομάσθη.<sup>5</sup> σούραν γὰρ οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι τὴν κνήμην λέγουσι.

Πάλιν δὲ δίκην ἔχων καὶ διαφθείρας ἐνίους τῶν δικαστῶν, ἐπεὶ δυσὶ μόναις ἀπέφυγε ψήφους, ἔφη παρανάλωμα γεγονέναι τὸ θατέρῳ κριτῆ δοθέν· ἀρκεῖν γὰρ εἴ καὶ μιᾷ ψήφῳ μόνον ἀπελιύθῃ.

Τοῦτον ὅντα τῇ φύσει τοιοῦτον κεκινημένον ὑπὸ τοῦ Κατιλίνα προσδιέφθειραν ἐλπίσι κεναῖς ψευδομάντεις καὶ γόντες ἐπη πεπλασμένα καὶ χρησμοὺς ἔδοντες, ὡς ἐκ τῶν Σιύλλειών<sup>6</sup> προδοηοῦντας εἰμαρμένους εἶναι τῇ Ῥώμῃ Κορηνήλιος τρέις μονάρχους, ὃν δύο μὲν ἦδη πεπληρώκεντα τὸ χρεών, Κίνναν τε καὶ Σιύλλαν, τρίτῳ δὲ λοιπῷ Κορηνήλιῳ ἐκείνῳ φέροντα τὴν μοναρχίαν ἡκειν τὸν δαίμονα, καὶ δεῦν πάντως δέχεσθαι καὶ μὴ διαφθείρειν μέλλοντα τοὺς καιροὺς ὥσπερ Κατιλίνας.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>5</sup> The apocryphal character of the story is made evident by the fact that the name Sura occurs much earlier, e.g. Liv. XXII. 31 (217 B.C.).

<sup>6</sup> The same oracle is recorded in Cic. in Cat. III. 4, 9; Sall. c. 47; Liv. Perioch. 102; Vell. Pat. II. 34; App. B. C. II. 2; Florus IV. 1, 8, and alluded to by Dio XXXVII. 34.

is followed by details which Plut. had given earlier (§ 39 oracle, § 40 burning of the city), Lentulus being there represented as acting independently. In Cic. and Sall. c. 44 these facts are stated as the confession of Volturcius, in Plut. the latter's evidence is associated only with the exposure of Lentulus.

1 * (D) Cic. l.c. T. Volturcius; Sallust: T. Volturcius quendam Crotoniensem; Appian: Βοντούρκιον ἀνδρα Κροτωνιάτην; Florus: Volturcius. The name given by Plut. is, therefore, not based upon Cic. or Sallust.

2 * (D) This is also completely at variance with Cic. l.c. and Sall. c. 41 (and Appian). According to the latter, moreover, the ambassadors reveal the plot to Q. Fabius Sanga, who in turn informs Cicero, but Sanga is not mentioned either in Cic. or in Plutarch.

3 (D) According to Cic. Cat. III. 3, 7, he opened the letters in the presence of witnesses before submitting them to the Senate.

4 These details are not mentioned elsewhere.

5 * Agrees with Cic. Cat. III. 3, 6, 5, 10 except as to the νεοθήκτους ἀπάστας.

6 (D) See p. 22.

7 (D) * Sall. c. 47 Lentulus itemque ceteri in liberis custodiis habeantur. Five custodians are mentioned, but there is no praetor among them!

8 This fact is not elsewhere mentioned.

42. ἐπεὶ τὴν ἐκείνου γυναικες κατεῖχον ἵεροις ἀπορρήτοις ὀργιάζονσαι θεόν, ἦν Πωμαῖοι μὲν ἀγαθήν, Ἐλλῆνες δὲ Γυναικέαν ὄνομάζουσι. Θύεται<sup>1</sup> δ' αὐτῇ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ ὑπάτου διὰ γυναικὸς ἡ μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, τῶν Ἐστιάδων παρθένων παρουσῶν. Εἰσελθὼν οὖν ὁ Κικέρων καθ' αὐτόν, ὀλίγων παντάπασιν αὐτῷ παρόντων, ἐφρόντιζεν ὅπως χρήσαυτο τοῖς ἀνδράσι. Τὴν τε γὰρ ἀκραν καὶ προσήκουσαν ἀδικήμασι τηλικούτοις τιμωρίαν ἔξευλαβεντο καὶ κατώκνει δι' ἐπιείκειαν ἥθους ἀμα καὶ ὡς μὴ δοκοίη τῆς ἔξουσίας ἄγαν ἐμφορεύσθαι καὶ πικρῶς ἐπεμβαίνειν ἀνδράσι γένει τε πρώτοις καὶ φίλους δυνατοὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει κεκτημένοις· μαλακώτερόν τε χρησάμενος ὡρρώδει τὸν ἀ' αὐτῶν κίνδυνον. Οὐ γὰρ ἀγαπήσειν μετριώτερόν τι θανάτου παθόντας, ἀλλ' εἰς ἄπαν ἀναρραγήσεσθαι τόλμης τῇ παλαιᾷ κακίᾳ νέαν ὄργην προσολαβόντας· αὐτός τε δόξειν ἄνανδρος καὶ μαλακός, οὐδὲ ἄλλως δοκῶν εὐτολμότατος εἶναι τοῖς πολλοῖς.

XX. Ταῦτα τοῦ Κικέρωνος διαποροῦντος γίνεται τι ταῖς γυναιξὶ σημεῖον θυούσαις. Οἱ γὰρ βωμός, ἥδη τοῦ πυρὸς κατακεκοιμῆσθαι δοκοῦντος, ἐκ τῆς τέφρας καὶ τῶν κεκαυμένων φλοιῶν φλόγα πολλὴν ἀνήκε καὶ λαμπράν. ‘Υφ’ ἡσ αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι διεπτοήθησαν, αἱ δὲ ἵεραι παρθένοι τὴν τοῦ Κικέρωνος γυναικα Τερεντίαν ἐκέλευσαν ἡ τάχος χωρεῦν πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ κελεύειν οἵς ἔγνωκεν ἐγχειρεῦν ὑπὲρ τῆς πατρίδος, ὡς μέγα πρός τε σωτηρίαν καὶ δόξαν αὐτῷ τῆς θεοῦ φῶς διδούσσης.

<sup>1</sup> On this prodigy and the deliberations of Cicero, see p. 18. The latter are attributed to him by Sall. c. 46 on the eve of the exposure, and he ignores the alleged portent: anxius erat, dubitans, in maxumo scelere tantis civibus deprehensis, quid facto opus esset; poenam illorum sibi oneri, impunitatem perdundae rei publicae fore credebat. Igitur confirmato animo vocari ad sese iubet Lentulum etc. Sallust does not state the reason for this ‘confirmatio animi.’ Did he perhaps have in mind the alleged omen? If so, his well-known radical views on the subject of prodigia might have been the cause for not mentioning it.

<sup>2</sup> Wherever this remark may have been made, it cannot have occurred in the ὑπόμνημα τῆς ὑπαρελας for the reasons given on p. 19 f. Hence the entire story cannot have been taken by Plut. from this source.

<sup>3</sup> (D) On the other hand, Cicero (in Cat. IV. 2, 3) says she was examata.

<sup>1</sup> This is not confirmed by any extant utterances of Cicero and may have been based upon the de petitione consulatis.

<sup>2</sup> As the original could have left no doubt as to his meaning (cp. Sall. c. 51), this quibble cannot be authentic. It is again mentioned in Plut. Cat. Min. 22 and in Suet. Caes. 14, tantum metum iniecit asperiora suadentibus . . . ut Decimum Silanum . . . non piguerit sententiam suam . . . interpretatione lenire velut gravius atque ipse sensisset exceptam. Here, as in § 46<sup>b</sup>, Plutarch and Suetonius are the only authorities for these details. According to Sall. c. 50, Silanus merely changed his vote permotus oratione C. Caesaris.

<sup>7</sup> The same error as in § 40<sup>7</sup>, p. 82. Sall. c. 55 says that the condemned conspirators, with the exception of Lentulus, were taken to prison per praetores, but App. B. C. II. 6 ἔκαστον αὐτῶν δὲ Κικέρων ἐς τὸ δεσμωτήριον μεταγαγών.

παρέδωκε τὸν Λέντλον τῷ δημιúῳ καὶ προσέταξεν ἀνελεῖν· εἴθ' ἔξῆς τὸν Κέθηγον, καὶ οὐτω τῶν ἄλλων ἔκαστον καταγαγὴν ἀπέκτεινεν.

“Ηδη δ' ἦν ἐσπέρα, καὶ δι' ἀγορᾶς ἀνέβαινεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, οὐκέτι σιωπῆ τῶν πολιτῶν οὐδὲ τάξει προτεμπόντων αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ φωναῖς καὶ κρότοις δεχομένων, καθ' οὓς γένοιτο, σωτῆρα καὶ κτίστηρα ἀνακαλούντων τῆς πατρίδος.<sup>2</sup> Τὰ δὲ φῶτα πολλὰ κατέλαμπε τοὺς στενωπούς, λαμπάδια καὶ δῆδας ιστώντων ἐπὶ ταῖς θύραις. Αἱ δὲ γυναῖκες ἐκ τῶν τεγών προῦφαινον ἐπὶ τιμῆς καὶ θέᾳ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ὑπὸ πομπῆς τῶν ἀρίστων μάλα σερινῶς ἀνιόντος· ὃν οἱ πλέοντοι πολέμους τε κατειργασμένοι μεγάλους καὶ διὰ θριάμβων εἰσεληλακότες καὶ προσκεκτημένοι γῆν καὶ θάλατταν οὐκ δλίγην ἐβάδιζον ἀνομολογούμενοι πρὸς ἀλλήλους, πολλοῖς μὲν τῶν τότε ἥγεμόνων καὶ στρατηγῶν πλούτουν καὶ λαφύρων καὶ δυνάμεως χάριν ὅφείλειν τὸν Ῥωμαίων δῆμον, ἀσφαλείας δὲ καὶ σωτηρίας ἐνī μόνῳ Κικέρωνι, τηλικοῦτον ἀφελόντι καὶ τοσοῦτον αὐτοῦ κινδυνον.<sup>3</sup> Οὐ γὰρ τὸ κωλύσαι τὰ πραττόμενα καὶ κολάσαι τοὺς πράττοντας ἐδόκει θαυμαστόν, ἀλλ' ὅτι μέγιστον τῶν πώποτε νεωτερισμῶν οὗτος ἐλαχίστοις κακοῖς ἄνευ στάσεως καὶ ταραχῆς κατέσβεσε.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This graphic description is unquestionably of one piece and hence necessarily taken from one and the same authority, highly favorable to Cicero. But that this source was the ὑπόμνημα, as is universally assumed, is refuted by ἔξησαν, which clearly proves that Plutarch read the word vixerunt in a Latin narrative, in which he must also have found the explanation of the euphemism. That Appian, though he exhibits many noteworthy coincidences with Plutarch in these particular chapters, did not consult this biography or a common third source, is made evident by the words: τοὺς ἐν ἀγορᾷ παροδεύων ἐσήμηνεν, δτι τεθνᾶσιν.

Such divergences (see below p. 91<sup>3</sup>), the vagueness of ἐν τινὶ δικῇ (three times), the censorious object which these witticisms are made to subserve (§ 54), and the fact that not one of them is found in Cicero's extant writings, seem to me to preclude Tiro's de iociis Ciceronis as Plutarch's source for c. 25-27. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τὸν γε παῦδα Κικέρωνος ὁ Βροῦτος ἐν Ἀθήναις διατρίβοντα παρὰ τοῖς φιλοσόφοις ἀναλαβὼν ἔσχεν ἐφ' ἡγεμονίας καὶ πολλὰ χρώμενος αὐτῷ κατώρθουν.<sup>2</sup>

92. Τοῦ δὲ Κικέρωνος ἀκμὴν ἔσχεν ἡ δύναμις<sup>3</sup> ἐν τῇ πάλει τότε μεγίστην, καὶ κρατῶν ὅστον ἐβούλετο τὸν μὲν Ἀντώνιον ἐξέκρουσε καὶ κατεστασάσε καὶ πολεμήσοντας αὐτῷ τὸν δύο ὑπάτους, Ἰριτον καὶ Πάνσαν, ἐξέπεμψε, Καίσαρε δὲ ῥαβδούχους καὶ στρατηγικὸν κόσμον,<sup>4</sup> ὡς δὴ προπολεμοῦντι τῆς πατρίδος, ἐπεισε ψηφίσασθαι τὴν σύγκλητον.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ Ἀντώνιος μὲν ἦττο, τῶν δὲ ὑπάτων ἀμφοτέρων ἀποθανόντων ἐκ τῆς μάχης<sup>5</sup> πρὸς Καίσαρα συνέστησαν αἱ δυνάμεις, δείσασα δὲ ἡ βουλὴ νέον ἄνδρα<sup>6</sup> καὶ τύχῃ λαμπρᾷ κεχρημένον ἐπειράτο τιμᾶς καὶ δωρεᾶς ἀποκαλεῖν αὐτοῦ τὰ στρατεύματα καὶ περισπᾶν τὴν δύναμιν, ὡς μὴ δεομένη τῶν προπολεμούντων Ἀντωνίου πεφενύγοτος, οὕτως ὁ Καίσαρ φοβηθεὶς ὑπέπεμπε τῷ Κικέρωνι τοὺς δεομένους καὶ πείθοντας ὑπατείαν μὲν ἀμφοτέρους ὅμοι πράττειν,<sup>7</sup> χρῆσθαι δὲ τοὺς πράγμασιν ὅπως αὐτὸς ἔγνωκε, παραλαμβάνοντα τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ τὸ μειράκιον διοικεῖν ὄνομάτος καὶ δόξης γλυχόμενον.

93. Ωμολόγει δὲ Καίσαρ αὐτός, ὡς δεδώς κατάλυσιν καὶ κινδυνεύων ἔργος γενέσθαι χρήσατο τῇ Κικέρωνος ἐν δέοντι φιλαρχίᾳ, προτρεψάμενος αὐτὸν ὑπατείαν μετέιναι συμπράττοντος αὐτοῦ καὶ συναρχαρεσιάζοντος.

XLVI. Ἐνταῦθα μέντοι μάλιστα Κικέρων ἐπαρθεὶς<sup>8</sup> ὑπὸ νέου γέρων καὶ φενακισθεὶς καὶ συναρχαρεσιάσας καὶ παρασχῶν αὐτῷ τὴν σύγκλητον εὐθὺς μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων αἰτίαν εἶχεν, ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὑστερον αὐτὸν ἀπολωλεκώς γῆσθετο καὶ τοῦ δήμου προέμενος τὴν ἐλευθερίαν.

COMPARISON OF DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO

99. I. Α μὲν οὖν ἄξια μνήμης τῶν περὶ Δημοσθένους καὶ Κικέρωνος ἴστοροι μέντοι εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀφίκται γνῶσιν, ταῦτ' ἐστίν.

Αφεικὼς δὲ τὸ συγκρίνειν τὴν ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἔξιν αὐτῶν ἐκεῖνό μοι δοκῶ μὴ παρῆσεν ἄρρητον, ὅτι Δημοσθένης μὲν εἰς τὸ βῆτορικὸν ἐνέτεινε πᾶν, ὃσον εἴχεν ἐν φύσεως ἡ ἀσκήσεως λόγιον, ὑπερβαλλόμενος ἐναργείᾳ μὲν καὶ δεινότητι τοὺς ἐπὶ τῶν ἀγώνων καὶ τῶν δικῶν συνεξεταζομένους, ὅγκῳ δὲ καὶ μεγαλοπρεπείᾳ τοὺς ἐπιδεικτικούς, ἀκριβείᾳ δὲ καὶ τέχνῃ τοὺς σοφιστάς.

100. Κικέρων δὲ καὶ πολυμαθὴς καὶ ποικίλος τῇ περὶ τοὺς λόγους σπουδῇ γενόμενος συντάξεις μὲν ἴδιας φιλοσόφους ἀπολέλοιπεν οὐκ δλίγας εἰς τὸν Ἀκαδημαϊκὸν τρόπον, οὐ μὴν ἄλλα καὶ διὰ τῶν πρὸς τὰς δίκας καὶ τοὺς ἀγῶνας γραφομένων λόγων δῆλος ἐστιν ἐμπειρίαν τινὰ γραμμάτων παρεπιδείκνυσθαι βουλόμενος.<sup>3</sup>

Ἐστι δέ τις καὶ τοῦ ἥθους ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἐκατέρουν δίοψις. Ο μὲν γὰρ Δημοσθενικὸς ἔξι παντὸς ὠραιότερον καὶ παιδιᾶς εἰς δεινότητα καὶ σπουδὴν συνηγμένος οὐκ ἐλλυχίνων ὅδωδεν, ὥσπερ ὁ Πυθέας ἐσκω-πτεν, ἄλλ' ὑδροποσίας καὶ φροντίδων καὶ τῆς λεγομένης πικράς τοῦ τρόπου καὶ στυγνότητος,

101. Κικέρων δὲ πολλαχοῦ τῷ σκωπτικῷ πρὸς τὸ βωμολόχον ἐκφερόμενος καὶ πράγματα σπουδῆς ἄξια γέλωτι καὶ παιδιῷ κατειρω-νεύμενος ἐν ταῖς δίκαιαις εἰς τὸ χρεῶδες ἡφείδει τοῦ πρέποντος, ὥσπερ ἐν τῇ Καιλίου συνηγορίᾳ μηδὲν ἄποτον ποιεῖν αὐτὸν ἐν τοσαύτῃ

τρυφῇ καὶ πολυτελείᾳ ταῖς ἡδοναῖς χρώμενον· τὸ γὰρ ὅν ἔξεστι μὴ μετέχειν, μανικὸν εἶναι, καὶ ταῦτα ἐν ἡδονῇ τὸ εὐδαιμόν τῶν ἐπιφανεστάτων φιλοσόφων τιθεμένων.<sup>1</sup>

102. Δέγεται<sup>2</sup> δὲ Κάτων Μουρήναν διώκοντος ὑπατεύων ἀπολογίσθαι καὶ πολλὰ διὰ τὸν Κάτωνα κωμῳδεῖν τὴν Στωϊκὴν αἱρεσίν ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀτοπίαις τῶν παραδόξων λεγομένων δογμάτων· γέλωτος δὲ λαμπτροῦ κατιόντος ἐκ τῶν περιεστώτων πρὸς τοὺς δικαστάς, ἡσυχῆ διαμειδιάσας [ὁ Κάτων*] πρὸς τοὺς καθημένους εἰπεῖν· “Ως γελοῖον, ὡς ἄνδρες, ἔχομεν ὑπατον.” Δοκεῖ δὲ καὶ γέλωτος οἰκεῖος ὁ Κικέρων γεγονέναι καὶ φιλοσκώπτης, τό τε πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ μειδίαμα καὶ γαλήνην παρεῖχε.<sup>3</sup>

Τῷ δὲ Δημοσθένους ἀεὶ τις ἐπῆν σπουδή, καὶ τὸ πεφροντικὸς τοῦτο καὶ σύννουν οὐδὲ δίδιντος ἀπέλιπεν· ὅθεν καὶ δύσκολον αὐτὸν οἱ ἔχθροὶ καὶ δύστροπον, ὡς αὐτός φησιν, ἀπεκάλουν.

II. Ἐτι τούνν ἐν τοῖς συγγράμμασι κατιδεῖν ἔστι τὸν μὲν ἔμμελῶς καὶ ἀνεπαχθῶς τῶν εἰς αὐτὸν ἀπτόμενον ἐγκωμίων, ὅτε τούτου δεήσαι πρὸς ἔτερόν τι μεῖζον, τάλλα δὲ εὐλαβῆ καὶ μέτριον.

103. ἡ δὲ Κικέρωνος ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἀμετρίᾳ τῆς περιαντολογίας ἀκρασίαν τινὰ κατηγόρει πρὸς δόξαν βοῶντος, ὡς τὰ ὅπλα ἔδει τῇ τηβέννῳ καὶ τῇ γλώττῃ τὴν θριαμβικὴν ὑπείκειν δάφνην.<sup>4</sup>

Τελευτῶν δὲ οὐ τὰ ἔργα καὶ τὰς πράξεις μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς λόγους ἐπαινεῖ τὸν εἴρημένους ὑπὸ αὐτοῦ καὶ γεγραμμένους, ὥσπερ Ἰσοκράτει καὶ Ἀναξιμένει τοὺς σοφισταῖς διαμειρακιεύμενος, οὐ τὸν Ῥωμαίων δῆμον ἀγειν ἀξιῶν καὶ ὄρθοῦν, βριθύν, δπλιτοπάλαν, δᾶιον ἀντιπάλοις.

Ίσχύειν μὲν γὰρ διὰ λόγου τὸν πολιτευόμενον ἀναγκαῖον, ἀγαπᾶν δὲ ἀγενὲς καὶ λιχνεύειν τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ λόγου δόξαν. Ὁθεν ἐμβριθέστερος ταύτη καὶ μεγαλοπρεπέστατος ὁ Δημοσθένης, τὴν μὲν αὐτοῦ δύναμιν ἐμπειρίαν τινὰ πολλῆς δεομένην τῆς παρὰ τῶν ἀκρωμένων ἐνοίας ἀποφανόμενος, ἀνελευθέρους δὲ καὶ βαναύσους, ὥσπερ εἰσί, τοὺς ἐπὶ τούτῳ φυσωμένους ἡγούμενος.

<sup>1</sup> Probably refers to 12, 28 ff., but 17, 39 f. is sufficient to show that Pl. never read this speech. See also p. 65.

<sup>4</sup> = Cedant arma togae, concedat laurea linguae (Cicero: laudi). This line, ridiculed by contemporaries and later writers, is energetically defended by Cicero himself (in Pis. 29, 72–30, 75; Phil. II. 8, 20; de off. I. 22, 77). Plutarch cannot, therefore, have read these works. It is, moreover, the only quotation of a Latin verse in his writings. See also p. 18<sup>2</sup>. The reading linguae (Quint. IX. 4, 41; Ps. Sall. Invect. in Cic. 3, 6) seems to be the emendation of a rhetorician. If so, it would furnish another proof against a pre-Augustan origin of Plutarch's information.

III. Ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐν τῷ δημητηρεῖν καὶ πολιτεύεσθαι δύναμις ὁμαλῶς ἀμφοτέρους ὑπῆρξεν, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς τῶν ὅπλων καὶ στρατοπέδων κυρίους δεῦσθαι, Δημοσθένους μὲν Χάρητα καὶ Διοπείθην καὶ Λεωσθένην, Κικέρωνος δὲ Πομπήιον καὶ Καΐσαρα τὸν νέον, ὡς αὐτὸς ὁ Καΐσαρ ἐν τοῖς πρὸς Ἀγρίπαν καὶ Μαϊκήναν ὑπομνήμασιν εἴρηκεν. Ὁ δὲ δοκεῖ μάλιστα καὶ λέγεται τρόπον ἀνδρὸς ἐπιδεικνύναι καὶ βασανίζειν, ἔχουσία καὶ ἀρχὴν πᾶν πάθος κινοῦσα καὶ πᾶσαν ἀποκαλύπτουσα κακίαν, Δημοσθένει μὲν οὐχ ὑπῆρξεν, οὐδὲ ἔδωκε τοιαύτην διάπειραν ἑαυτοῦ μηδεμίαν ἀρχὴν τῶν ἐπιφανῶν ἄρξας, ὃς οὐδὲ τῆς ὑφ' αὐτοῦ συντεταγμένης ἐπὶ Φύλιππον ἐστρατήγησε δυνάμεως.

104. Κικέρων δὲ ταμίας εἰς Σικελίαν καὶ ἀνθύπατος εἰς Κιλικίαν καὶ Καππαδοκίαν ἀποσταλείς, ἐν φ' καιρῷ τῆς φιλοπλούστιας ἀκμαζούσῃς, καὶ τῶν πεμπομένων στρατηγῶν καὶ ἡγεμόνων, ὡς τοῦ κλέπτειν ἀγενούς ὄντος, ἐπὶ τὸ ἀρπάζειν τρεπομένων, οὐ τὸ λαμβάνειν ἐδόκει δεινόν, ἀλλ' ὁ μετρίως τοῦτο ποιῶν ἡγαπάτο, πολλὴν μὲν ἐπίδειξιν ὑπεροφίας χρημάτων ἐποιήσατο, πολλὴν δὲ φιλαθρωπίας καὶ χρηστότητος.<sup>1</sup>

105. Ἐν αὐτῷ δὲ τῇ Ῥώμῃ λόγῳ μὲν ἀποδειχθεὶς ὑπατος, ἔχουσίαν δὲ λαβὼν αὐτοκράτορος καὶ δικτάτορος ἐπὶ τοὺς περὶ Κατιλίναν, ἐμαρτύρησεν ἀμα τῷ Πλάτωνι μαντευομένῳ παῦλαν ἔξειν κακῶν τὰς πόλεις, ὅταν εἰς ταῦτα δύναμις τε μεγάλη καὶ φρόνησις ἐκ τινος τύχης χρηστής ἀπαντήσῃ μετὰ δικαιοσύνης.

Χρηματίσασθαι τοίνουν ἀπὸ τοῦ λόγου Δημοσθένης μὲν ἐπιψόγως λέγεται, λογογραφῶν κρύφα τοῖς περὶ Φορμίωνα καὶ Ἀπολλόδωρον ἀντιδίκους, καὶ δαβλῆδες μὲν ἐπὶ τοὺς βασιλικοὺς χρήμασιν, ὀφλῶν δὲ τῶν Ἀρκαλείων. Εἰ δὲ ταῦτα τοὺς γράφοντας (οὐν ὀλίγοι δ' εἰσὶν οὗτοι) ψεύδεσθαι φαίμενοι, ἀλλ' ὅτι γε τρὸς δωρεὰς βασιλέων σὺν χάριτι καὶ τιμῇ διδομένας ἀντιβλέψαι Δημοσθένης οὐκ ἀν ἐτόλμησεν, οὐδὲ ἦν τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον ἀνθρώπου δανείζοντος ἐπὶ ναυτικοῖς, ἀμήχανον ἀντειπεῖν· περὶ δὲ Κικέρωνος, ὅτι καὶ Σικελιωτῶν ἀγορανομοῦντι καὶ βασιλέως τοῦ Καππαδοκῶν ἀνθυπατεύοντι καὶ τῶν ἐν Ῥώμῃ φίλων, ὅτ' ἔξεπιπτε τῆς πόλεως, δωρουμένων πολλὰ καὶ δεομένων λαβεῖν ἀντέσχειν, εἴρηται.

IV. Καὶ μήν ἡ γε φυγὴ τῷ μὲν αἰσχρὰ κλοπῆς ἀλόντι συνέπεσε, τῷ δὲ κάλλιστον ἔργον ἀνθρώπους ἀλιτηρίους ἐκκόψαντι τῆς πατρίδος. Διὸ τοῦ μὲν οὐδεὶς λόγος ἐκπίπτοντος, ἐφ' φ' δ' ἡ σύγκλητος ἐσθῆτά τε διήλαξε καὶ πένθος ἔσχε καὶ γνώμην ὑπὲρ οὐδενὸς εἰπεῖν ἐπείσθη πρότερον ἡ Κικέρωνι κάθοδον ψηφίσασθαι.

106. Τὴν μέντοι φυγὴν ἀργῶς ὁ Κικέρων διήνεγκεν ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ καθήμενος, τῷ δὲ Δημοσθένει καὶ ἡ φυγὴ μέγα μέρος τῆς πολιτείας γέγονε. Συναγωνιζόμενος γάρ, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, τοῖς Ἑλλησι καὶ τοὺς Μακεδόνων πρέσβεις ἔξελαύνων ἐπήρχετο τὰς πόλεις, πολὺν βελτίων Θεμιστοκλέους καὶ Ἀλκιβιάδον παρὰ τὰς αὐτὰς τύχας φανεῖς πολέτης· καὶ μέρτοι κατελθὼν αὖθις ἑαυτὸν ἐπέδωκεν εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν ταύτην πολιτείαν καὶ διετέλει πολεμῶν πρὸς Ἀντίπατρον καὶ Μακεδόνας.

107. Κικέρωνα δὲ ὠνεῖδισεν ἐν τῇ βουλῇ Δαίλιος αἰτουμένου Καίσαρος ὑπατείαν μετέιναι παρὰ νόμον, σύπτω γενειώντος, σιωπῆ καθήμενον. Ἔγραφε δὲ καὶ Βροῦτος<sup>1</sup> ἐγκαλῶν ὡς μείζονα καὶ βαρυτέραν πεπαιδοτριβηκότι τυραννίδα τῆς ὑφ' αὐτοῦ καταλυθείσης.

APPENDIX III

PLUT. DEM. 2. 3

(See p. 4.)

Τῷ μέντοι σύνταξιν ὑποβεβλημένῳ καὶ ιστορίαν ἐξ οὐ προχείρων οὐδὲ οἰκείων, ἀλλὰ ξένων τε τῶν πολλῶν καὶ διεσπαρμένων ἐν ἔτεροις συνιοῦσαν ἀναγνωσμάτων τῷ ὅντι χρή πρῶτον ὑπάρχειν καὶ μάλιστα τὴν πόλιν εὑδόκιμον καὶ φιλόκαλον καὶ πολυάνθρωπον, ὡς βιβλίων τε παντοδαπῶν ἀφθονίαν ἔχων, καὶ δσα τοὺς γράφοντας διαφέύγοντα σωτηρίᾳ μνήμης ἐπιφανεστέραν εἰλῆφε πίστιν ὑπολαμβάνων ἀκοῇ καὶ διαπυνθανόμενος, μὴ πολλῶν μηδ' ἀναγκαίων ἐνδεὲς ἀποδίδοι τὸ ἔργον. Ἡμεῖς δὲ μικρὰν οἰκοῦντες πόλιν, καὶ ἵνα μὴ μικροτέρα γένηται φιλοχωροῦντες, ἐν δὲ Ῥώμῃ καὶ ταῖς περὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν διατριβᾶς οὐ σχολῆς οὐσῆς γυμναζέσθαι περὶ τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν διάλεκτον ὑπὸ χρειῶν πολιτικῶν καὶ τῶν διὰ φιλοσοφίαν πλησιαζόντων, ὁψέ ποτε καὶ πόρρω τῆς ἡλικίας ἥρξάμεθα Ῥωμαϊκοῖς γράμμασιν ἐντυγχάνειν. Καὶ πρᾶγμα θαυμαστὸν μέν, ἀλλ' ἀληθὲς ἐπάσχομεν. Οὐ γάρ οὕτως ἐκ τῶν ὄνομάτων τὰ πράγματα συνιέναι καὶ γνωρίζειν συνέβαινεν ἡμῖν, ὡς ἐκ τῶν πραγμάτων ἀμῶς γέ πως εἴχομεν ἐμπειρίας ἐπακολουθεῖν διὰ τάντα καὶ τοῖς ὄνόμασι. Κάλλους δὲ Ῥωμαϊκῆς ἀπαγγελίας καὶ τάχους αἰσθάνεσθαι καὶ μεταφορᾶς ὄνομάτων καὶ ἀρμονίας καὶ τῶν ἄλλων, οἷς ὁ λόγος ἀγάλλεται, χάριεν μὲν ἡγούμεθα καὶ οὐκ ἀτερπές· ἡ δὲ πρὸς τοῦτο μελέτη καὶ ἀσκησις οὐκ εὐχερής, ἀλλ' οἰστισι πλείων τε σχολὴ καὶ τὰ τῆς ὥρας ἔτι πρὸς τὰς τοιαύτας ἐπιχωρεῖ φιλοτιμίας.

Διὸ καὶ γράφοντες ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ, τῶν παραλλήλων βίων ὅντι πέμπτῳ, περὶ Δημοσθένους καὶ Κικέρωνος, ἀπὸ τῶν πράξεων καὶ τῶν πολιτειῶν τὰς φύσεις αὐτῶν καὶ τὰς διαθέσεις πρὸς ἀλλήλας ἐπισκεψόμεθα, τὸ δὲ τοὺς λόγους ἀντεξετάζειν καὶ ἀποφαίνεσθαι, πότερος ἡ δεινότερος εἰπεῖν, ἐάσομεν. Κάκει γάρ, ὡς φησιν ὁ Ἰων, “δελφῖνος ἐν χέρσῳ βίᾳ,” ἦν ὁ περιττὸς ἐν ἀπασι Κεκίλιος ἀγνοήσας ἐνεανιεύσατο σύγκρισιν τοῦ Δημοσθένους καὶ Κικέρωνος ἐξενεγκεῖν. Ἀλλὰ γὰρ ἵσως, εἰ παντὸς ἦν τὸ “Γνῶθι σαυτὸν” ἔχειν πρόχειρον, οὐκ ἀν ἐδόκει πρόσταγμα θεῖον εἶναι.
